Farewell, Charley Boston

Royalties invited to the wedding have enjoyed a great "shoot" on the king's estate. Each with a gun, royal ladies and gentlemen stood at positions assigned to them. Beaters drove to a clearing wild animals of all sorts. Rabbits, wild boar, and as they appeared royalty shot and killed as many as possible.

Then, as royalty could not eat all or even a tenth of what was killed, the rest went to the poor in Rome.

Six thousand convicts were set free that they might rejoice with the rest of Italy.

That also is in accordance with ancient custom.

A new, unpleasant feature is the desire of Italian anarchists, opposed to Mussolini, to do to royalties what the latter did to the game driven past them.

The London Daily Mail published a plot to kill the royalties by blowing up the chapel during the marriage ceremony or mowing them down with machine guns when they left the chapel door.

Belgrade hears of revolution in Albania aimed at King Ahmed Bey Zogu, who has been trying to westernize Albania, giving small imitation of Peter The Great.

Albanians don't want to be westernized. They are attached to ancient habits, which include hunting strangers with big bear hounds.

The Balkan region is to revolutions what a well-managed incubator is to chicks. They appear quite often, and represent one of many European threats of war.

How amusing it would be, after we get into the World Court, and slip gradually into the League of Nations, if the usual Balkan war should break out and Uncle Sam were told: "You are rich and haven't lost many men. Go over, supply men and money to deal with this problem."

Congressman Beedy of Maine, ancient by dry, called forth applause in the House of Representatives yesterday, telling congressmen the coast guard must shoot or "we must wipe the Eighteenth Amendment off the statute book."

Congressman LaGuardia from New York told the House that transferring prohibition enforcement from the Treasury to the Department of Justice would ruin that department, "just as the coast guard has been corrupted," by bribery.

It is a difficult prohibition problem, but American intelligence will find a way to solve it.

One thing is certain, prohibition is NOT coming out of the Constitution.

New York's Chinatown will bury Charley Boston, now lying in state in Mulberry st. The funeral will be grand and rather complicated.

Charley Boston, founder of the On Leon Tong, was a good American Christian in New York, but as a Chinese he remained a disciple of Confucius, a believer in that philosophy.

In one way Confucianism and Christianity are not very far apart. Christianity says, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

Confucius said, hundreds of years before Christianity, "You not do unto others what you would not have them do unto you."

Mr. McManus, shot through the back, probably dying, said to police questioning him: "Don't bother me. They got me. I'm through."

McManus, who had three revolvers on his person when shot, was an open enemy of an eminent gangster called "Whoops-A-Daisy" O'Connor, killed last September. Gangster killings are frequent, but recruiting is more rapid than the killing.

We exaggerate often the wisdom and skill of the ancients.

Surgeons, oft-hand, said: "How marvellous that ancient Aztecs, with primitive instruments, could operate on the skull, and, presumably, remove tumors or other causes of danger."

Dr. Herbert V. Williams, who teaches medical pathology at the University of Buffalo, returns from Peru and Chile with the real story.

When the South American of ancient days had a bad headache, the "Medicine Man" said:

"There are evil spirits in your head; I'll fix that."

$75,000,000 Motor Subway Urged for Downtown

CIVIC CENTER ON P.O. SITE

$75,000,000 STREET AND SUBWAY

New Downtown Traffic Plan Is Submitted to Curley, Who Wants It Studied

Plans for a new street and a motor subway through downtown Boston between Tremont and Washington sts., from Stuart to Hanover, were placed before Mayor Curley today.

The proposition would entail an expenditure of from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 by the city or a private syndicate that shall the city's cooperation.

Sponsors of the plans are Bruce Wetmore and William J. McDonald.

After discussing the plans with Mr. Wetmore and Mr. McDonald, the mayor declared they should be made the subject of a year's study and that the public should be made acquainted with every detail of such a "courageous project."

STREET 60 FEET WIDE

Mayor Curley was informed that Prof. Miller McClintock, Henry I. Harriman and Fred H. Fay have seen and approved the plans.

The surface and underground thoroughfare is tentatively known as Boston's through traffic route and motor subway.

PRINCESS IS BRIDE AMID SPLENDOR

Marie Jose Weds the Crown Prince of Italy; Pope Presents Couple With Gifts

Rome, Jan. 8—Sweethearts since childhood, Crown Prince Humbert of Italy and Princess Marie Jose, only daughter of the King and Queen of the Belgians, were married today at one of the most picturesque ceremonies in years.

The ceremony was performed at noon in the historic Pauline Chapel of the Quirinal Palace, scene in past years of four conclaves for the election of popes, and scene six years ago of the wedding of Humbert's sister, Princess Yolanda, the Count Calvi di Bergolo.

Cardinal Maffi, Archbishop of Pisa, noted astronomer and friend of the Italian royal family, performed the ceremony. He was assisted by Mgr. Becarris, chaplain of the royal household, who baptized today's bridegroom, and was his spiritual mentor through childhood and youth.

Within a few hours after the wedding the prince and his bride made a call upon Pope Pius in the

CURLEY CALLS CITY PLANNING BOARD TO CONSIDER PROJECT

The site of the old Federal Building may become a civic center, housing a municipal auditorium and a new city hall, with the new postoffice on adjoining or nearby land.

The unconfirmed report that the postoffice would not be erected on the Federal building site today led Mayor Curley to call a conference of architects and the City Planning Board to discuss such a center on the location.

The meeting will be held at City Hall on Monday. Architects invited to discuss the proposition with the mayor are: Ralph Adams Cram, Charles Coolidge, Clarence Blackall and Charles D. Maginis.

While admitting that he had no confirmation of the Washington report that postal department officials considered the federal building site too small for the new post office, the mayor said he had called the conference so the city would be prepared.

A war memorial could be included inthe civic group, it was pointed out.

Local federal officials are surprised at the report Washington may abandon the site bounded by Devonshire, Congress, Water and Milk sts. The office of Edward Pearson, supervising engineer of Government buildings in Boston, is without such notification.

Boyden to Umpire German War Claims

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—Roland W. Boyden, Boston attorney, today was appointed umpire of the mixed claims commission to settle war claims between the United States and Germany.

Boyden will succeed the late Edwin B. Parker of Texas. Boyden was general counsel of the food administration during the war and has served on a number of governmental commissions during the last few years.

At the same time James W. Rerick of Concord, N. H., was named as war claims arbiter. He is a former justice of the New Hampshire Supreme Court. Parker at the time of his death was holding both the post of mixed claims umpire and war claims arbiter.

Mr. Boyden is the senior member of the law firm of Ropes, Gray, Boyden & Perkins, and was one of the "original Hoover men" in 1920. John Richelard, another member of the same firm, was another of Hoover's early supporters.

When President Hoover was forming his cabinet Mr. Boyden's name was mentioned as a possible choice for Secretary of State. He was supported by Senator Moses of New Hampshire for the place.

He was graduated from Harvard University in 1885 and Harvard Law School in 1888. He was widely known as a baseball and football player and served on the Harvard athletic committee.

Mr. Boyden is president of Beverly Savings Bank and a director of Beverly National Bank. He was formerly president of Boston Chamber of Commerce and served as a director of the First National Bank and other leading institutions.

His service with the food administration under Mr. Hoover was so impressive that he was appointed to the American delegation to the Paris peace conference and later was chosen to represent this country in reparation matters.

WIFE IS SLAIN; HUSBAND HELD

Her throat slashed by a heavy clasp knife, Mrs. Cliffe died after being admitted to the Atlantic City Hospital.

Physicians saved the life of her husband, who admitted the killing and declared he would do the same thing again under the circumstances.

Weakened by loss of blood, Cliff sobbed that he wanted to die and a police guard was placed around his bed.

ROSENWALD IS WED TO WIDOW

Philadelphia, Jan. 8 (AP)—Julius Rosenwald, head of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Chicago Philanthropist, was married today to Mrs. Adele Goodkind of St. Paul, Minn.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Judge Horace Stern of the Philadelphia common pleas court, at the home of Mr. Rosenwald's son, Lessing J. Rosenwald, Ogontz, Montgomery County. The son's wife is a daughter of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Rosenwald will leave tonight for Egypt. They will be accompanied to New York in a private car by some of the children.

Mr. Rosenwald's first wife died last May. Mrs. Goodkind was the widow of Benjamin Goodkind, who was prominent in St. Paul, Minn.

La Follette Wins in G. O. P. Senate Fight

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—Seeking a way out of a threatened public airing of differences between Senate Republicans, party leaders today tentatively agreed to the appointment of Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, a member of the Western Independents, to the powerful finance committee.

As the White House was reporting that President Hoover was taking no active part in the last quarrel between the Senate Republican Regulars and the Independents, the worried Senate leaders seriously considered Senators La Follette and Thomas of Idaho for the all-important finance committee vacancy assignments.

Thomas is a member of the "young guard" regulars and La Follette is a member of the group which has bolted the Hoover farm relief and tariff programs.

The Western independents, who are now without representation on the finance committee, have demanded the appointment of La Follette and have threatened a floor fight.

Senator Smoot of Utah, chairman of the finance committee, has strenuously opposed recognition of the independents on the committee which shapes up the revenue and tariff legislation.

John W. Reth Named State Fire Marshal

Two surprise appointments were made today by Governor Allen, and through one a Curley-named city officeholder had merely to walk up Beacon Hill into a better post.

John W. Reth, former State commander of the American Legion and yesterday dropped by Mayor Curley as veterans' relief commissioner, was named state fire marshal, succeeding George C. Neal, who died several weeks ago.

In his other appointment, the Governor named Gertrude Fiske, noted Boston painter, as a member of the State art commission, the first woman ever on that board. She takes the place of Walter Gilman Page, who resigned at the height of the controversy over Former Gov. David I. Walsh's portrait.

Heat Record Set, but Icy Wave's Coming

All records for Boston on January 8 were smashed today when the official temperature reached 64 degrees at 2 p. m.

The previous record was made on January 8, 1874, when the official temperature mounted to 55. Thus, for the two successive days temperature records have been shattered.

The lowest temperature in New England today was 38 at Greenville, Me.

According to the local forecast, the advance guard of the cold wave that grips the west will reach New England late tomorrow, when there will be a marked drop in temperatures. By Friday the full force of the icy blast will reach here.

TAYLOR CASE CRISIS NEARS

San Francisco, Jan. 8 (INS)—The first concrete development in the resurrection of the William Desmond Taylor murder mystery in Los Angeles was foreshadowed here today.

Otis Hefner, alias Nelson, ex-convict, who recently retold a story indicating knowledge of the crime, promised to surrender during the day to State Parole Officer Ed J. Whyte as a parole violator from Folsom Prison.

Whyte was anxious to question Hefner about what he actually knew of Taylor's murder eight years ago and his purported statements that a film actress was the slayer.

In a telephone conversation with the parole officer, District Attorney Buron Fitts of Los Angeles indicated that he did not believe Hefner had any tangible evidence

MRS. PINKHAM, STATE CLUB LEADER, DIES

Mrs. Wenona Osborne Pinkham, one of the State's most prominent woman civic leaders, died today at Bid Newton Hospital. She was 47 years of age.

On December 27, following an address before the Newton Center Women's Club, Mrs. Pinkham suffered a shock. She never rallied.

Her husband is Rev. Henry W. Pinkham, a retired clergyman. A daughter, Louise, 14, and two brothers, survive her. The funeral will probably be held on Sunday.

While she held many positions in civic and suffrage affairs, her most important post was that of executive secretary of the Massachusetts Civic League. As such she has been an important factor in many welfare movements and often in the public eye.

Less than two months ago, at a luncheon of the Civic League, she delivered an address attacking Boston night clubs and alleged immorality, drunkenness and drug distribution at Cape Cod summer resorts.

LEADER IN SUFFRAGE

She was a leader in the movement for a special women's unit of the state police.

Born in Colorado, she attended Denver schools and at the age of 18, following the death of her parents, she was the sole support of five younger brothers and sisters.

She was for 10 years a teacher and assistant principal in Denver schools, meanwhile completing a course at the University of Denver.

Coming east to find herself deprived of the voting privilege in Massachusetts, she offered her services to suffrage and served as state chairman of organization for the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association for three years.

AIDED PADLOCK LAW

As executive secretary she served the Boston League of Women Voters until six years ago when she assumed the corresponding position in the Massachusetts Civic League.

She always believed that women should have greater representation in the advancement and enforcement of laws aimed to safeguard young people.

She was instrumental in the Legislature's acceptance of the Hoque pedlock law and the bill proving compensation for prisoners. For social and religious publications she wrote many articles and her lecture program was extensive.

Offer Billy Sunday Place as Movie Actor

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 8 (AP)—Billy Sunday, who will conclude a series of revival meetings in Buffalo tonight, has been asked to go into the movies. He let this be known during the course of an address in Churchill Tabernacle.

"I have been offered $30,000 a week," he said. "I may do it and I may not. If I do, it will be to reach a lot of people who don't go to church."

The 67-year-old evangelist came here from a high western altitude and the change in climate has affected him adversely. He has had pains in his heart, lungs and stomach since he came to Buffalo and has been under the care of physicians.

Florida Whets Coolidge Appetite

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 8 (INS)—Calvin Coolidge, accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, arrived here at 7:20 a. m. today with 250 other officers and directors and agents of the New York Life Insurance Company to attend the company's annual conference.

The ex-President posed for the newsreels, but smilingly refused to say anything other than, "I want breakfast."

Several thousand tourists and residents gave the former President an ovation as he stepped from the train.

Mrs. Hoover Kept Indoors by Cold

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—Mrs. Hoover today remained in doors at the White House because of a severe cold from which she has been suffering for two weeks.

She did not accompany the President to the dinner given by Vice-President Curtis last night or to the reception at the Woman's Congressional Club. It was said at the White House today it was problematical whether Mrs. Hoover would attend the reception to the judiciary tomorrow night.

License of Ford's Captain Suspended

Providence, Jan. 8 (AP)—Capt. Oscar S. Anderson, master of Edsel B. Ford's motor yacht Stella which grounded on Hens and Chickens reef, Dec. 5, has been found guilty on all four specifications of negligence preferred against him and his license as a navigator has been suspended for 60 days. This was announced today by Capt. Robert B. Clark of the United States steamboat inspection service.

THREE KINGS AMONG ROYAL GUESTS AT WEDDING OF PRINCESS

SCENE OF SPLENDOR MARKS NUPTIALS IN HOLY CITY

Vatican and received from him the apostolic benediction. In addition, the pontiff presented the prince with a beautiful tapestry and the future queen of Italy with a golden rosary.

So great was the crush of happy spectators in the streets of Rome that the prince and princess were late for their call upon the pontiff and the princess apologized to the Pope for coming to see him dressed as she had been for the marriage since she had not time to change.

BLESSED BY THE POPE

The Pontiff reassured her and said he was glad to see her looking so charming in her nuptial attire. He imparted upon both a special apostolic blessing and wished them all happiness for themselves, their families and their beloved countries.

Subsequently the prince and his bride called upon Cardinal Gasparri, the Papal secretary of state, and visited St. Peter's, where they prayed at the tomb of the apostle.

Cardinal Gasparri, accompanied by the Papan Nuncio to Italy, Monsignor Borgongini Duca, returned the visit in behalf of the Pontiff.

The wedding was attended by three kings and two former kings.

They were King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, King Albert of the Belgians, King Boris of Bulgaria, former King Manuel of Portugal and Amanullah Khan, former King of Afghanistan.

In addition there were Queen Helena of Italy, Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, former Queen Elisabeth of Greece, former Queen Bouriya of Afghanistan and former Queen Amelia of Portugal.

In addition 28 princes and 26 princesses of the blood were in attendance. The royal guests included Prince Leopold and Princess Astrid, Duke and Duchess of Brabant, Prince Peril and Princess Eudoxia of Bulgaria, Prince Paul and Princess Olga of Jugoslavia.

The Duke of York represented his father, King George of Great Britain. Marshal Petain, saviour of Verdun, and M. Becq De Fouquires, director of the portocol, were present for France.

Ambassador John W. Garrett and Mrs. Garrett represented the United States. The Infante Don Ferdinand was sent by his cousin, King Alfonso for Spain. Premier Mussolini, his cabinet, secretaries and their wives were present.

MUSSOLINI IN LINE

Premier Mussolini was resplendent in a braided coat and hat and wore the gold chain of a Knight of the Holy Annunciation.

On duty to the altar were Princess Marie Jose, with her father, King Albert, at her right, was the first to leave the throne room for the chapel, after which entered King Victor Emmanuel with Queen Elisabeth of Belgium. Then came Prince Humbert with his mother, Queen Helena.

After the wedding Princess Marie Jose with Prince Humbert at her right, was the first to leave followed by King Victor Emmanuel with the Queen of the Belgians, and King Albert with Queen Helena.

The wedding procession passed first through an anteroom filled with palace servants and then into the great hall of the royal guard, where were the Roman aristocracy, the diplomatic secretaries of attaches and their wives, numbering about a thousand. This hall communicated with the chapel and the ceremony could be seen through an open door.

The wedding march was an old Sardinia hymn sung by the papal choir which was loaned the royal family for the occasion.

At the altar rail, waiting for her, stood the crown prince, resplendant in the full dress uniform of a colonel of infantry and wearing the collar of the Annunziata, Italy's highest decoration, about his neck.

The bride wore a cream-white velvet gown at ankle length with a mantle of the same material, seven yards long, and embroidered with ermine. The Queen of Italy wore cloth of gold with pearls and a golden mantle five yards long.

Cardinal Maffi, smiling benevolently, approached the royal couple as they went forward to the Prie-Dieux prepared for them before the altar. His cassock of brilliant red was surmounted by a cocchetto of rare old lace, and on his head was the cardinales red beretta. The Episcopal ring, studded with a brilliant amethyst, glittered on his finger.

The religious marriage was accompanied by a civil rite, which included the reading of the civil code and the signing of the register by the witnesses.

Those who signed the document were Cardinal Maffi, the bridal couple, King Victor Emmanuel, King Albert, Luigi Federzoni, president of the Senate, and Premier Mussolini, as notary of the crown.

Matrimony, the cardinal told the royal couple, "imposes the reciprocal obligation of faithfulness and assistance."

With just the suggestion of a friendly smile he told the heir to the throne that "the husband is the head of the family." "The wife," he added, "must follow her husband's civil condition and assume his family name," and is obliged to follow him "where he believes it opportune to fix his residence."

"The husband has the duty of protecting his wife and he must," the cardinal continued, "keep her close to him and administer to her all that is necessary for her life in proportion to his riches."

The cardinal rapidly passed over the sections of the code covering a possible abandonment of the conjugal domicile by the wife in which case the husband's obligation for her maintenance ceases.

He did, however, call to duty bound, worn the young bride that she could not give away her spoune's patrimony, pledge his credit, or raise money otherwise without his express authorization.

There were words when Cardinal Maffi told Marie Jose that she must contribute to her husband's maintenance if he had not sufficient means. (His father, King Victor, is reputed to be the richest man in all Italy.)

The nuptial mass was celebrated "according to royal prerogative." After reading of the Gospel the celebrant offered the missal to the King of Italy, who kissed it and returned it.

The cardinal, turning to the groom, asked:

"Humbert Nicholas Thomas John Mary of Savoy, do you intend to take for your legitimate spouse Princess Marie Jose Louise Adelaide Henrietta Gabrielle of the Belgians?"

The prince responded "Si!" meaning "Yes."

RINGS ARE BLESSED

"And you, Marie Jose Charlotte Sophia Amelia Henrietta Gabrielle of the Belgians," the cardinal continued, "do you intend to take for your legitimate spouse Humbert Nicholas Thomas John Mary of Savoy?"

"Si," answered the princess.

Witnesses for the bride were her brothers, the Duke of Brabant and the Count of Flanders, and for the bridegroom the Duke of Aosta and the Count of Turin. They held the veil over the heads of the two until they responded with "si," and then they let it fall.

Before answering the cardinal's question, each of the contracting parties turned toward parents for consent, which was given with a nod.

Cardinal Maffi then blessed the rings of the two and they exchanged them. The choir began "Oremus Pro Principe Noatro—Let Us Pray for Our Prince." The cardinal pronounced the prince and princess man and wife and the mass went on, punctuated with other bits of music.

At its conclusion the cardinal read the newly married couple the terms of the Pope's letter of special benediction to them.

Then, arm in arm, they marched down the central aisle of the chapel, bowing and smiling to the right and left, the future King and Queen of Italy.

FAY VISIT TO VATICAN.

They went through the palces to the balcony, where they were accorded a tremendous ovation by the crowd gathered below. They were cheered to the echo by the multitude, which included Fascist organizations drawn up in military formation.

Amidst all the splendor and pageantry of the wedding, one honored old custom that is observed at Italian private weddings also was observed at today's nuptial—the distribution to the guests of little white-coated candies.

Red liveried servants stood on the staircase with immense canisters of the candies and gave a scoopful to each guest after the ceremony.

The candies are supposed to have the same happy effect as the American custom of distributing the wedding cake.

The Pope's tapestry gift was a beautiful piece of work made in the Vatican factory. The rosary presented Princess Maria was set with precious stones.

Both thanked the Pontiff deeply, saying the gifts constituted precious souvenirs of their marriage. Their suite was then introduced and the Pontiff imparted the apostolic benediction upon the entire group.

The Vatican was bedecked with the Italian, Belgian and Papal flags. All buildings, such as St. John Lateran, St. Mary Major and the seminaries in Rome proper which enjoy extraterritoriality under the Lateran treaties were similarly decorated and tonight will be illuminated.

This was the Pope's express order, as he wished the Vatican City state to participate in the rejoicing.

The royal couple went in an open horse-drawn carriage driven by coachmen in red livery.

They were met at the foot of the monument by the minister of war and Prince Boncompagni Ludovisi, Governor of Rome, and the representatives of all arms of the service. After a brief moment of prayer, the couple returned to the Quirinal cheered lustily by a big crowd which was held back by soldiers and police.

Wedding Today Fourth in Historic Quirinal's Splendor

Rome, Jan. 8—Today was the fourth time that a royal marriage had taken place in the Pauline Chapel of the Quirinal, which has been a Christian church for 313 years.

Pope Pius IX officiated at the first marriage, the wedding, in September, 1851, of Princess Maria Immacolata Clementina, eldest daughter of King Ferdinand II of Naples, to the Archduke Carlo Salvator of Tuscany.

The second wedding in the chapel was only a month later, when by bridegroom-proxy, the Archduke Karl Ludwig, brother of the Austrian Emperor, was united to Princess Maria Annunziata Isabella, sister of King Francis [illegible] Cardinal Sforza blessed the union.

GEORGEOUS DECORATIONS

Not until April 9, 1923, after the chapel had been closed since capture of Rome by Italian troops, did the third wedding occur.

This saw the union of Princess Yolanda, sister of Crown Prince Humbert, and Count Carlo Calvi Di Bergolo.

For today's ceremonies the chapel was draped in deep red velvet, fringed with gold, which took hours to hang.

Also hung were 25 priceless tapestries, including four gobelins.

The chamber was built by Architect Carlo Maderno on the order of Pope Paul V, who consecrated it himself on January 25, 1616.

MAGNIFICENT STRUCTURE

Among its chief ornaments is a beautiful bas-relief in marble by the Sculptor Taddeo Landini, representing Christ washing the feet of his apostles.

Throughout, its structure the chapel is rich in marble and has a floor that rivals that of the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican.

During the Napoleonic occupation, Napoleon contemplated using the Quirinal as a residence for himself but he never moved his court to Rome.

In this occupation, the chapel was despoiled of many of its choicest altar ornaments and rich damask hangings installed by Pope Clement VIII. Restoration of the interior was effected in 1818, however.

Princess "White" Bride in a Gown of Rare Beauty

Rome, Jan. 8—Princess Marie Jose of Belgium, wed in Rome today, made a beautiful bride, and her gown was magnificent. She was a "white" bride, the costume, on which the best dressmakers of Europe labored for months, being of white silk and panne velvet trimmed with ermine.

It had a white velvet court mantle 18 feet long, trimmed with white ermine 16 inches wide. The wedding veil was of Brussels lace.

The costumes of the guests, prescribed by court etiquette, put the stamp of the highest approval in Europe on long skirts, and on modesty in dress, decolletes being forbidden.

U. S. CAN'T CUT ITS CRUISER STRENGTH

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—As viewed in advance from Washington, the forthcoming London naval conference presents a picture in historic contrast to the memorable outlines of the gathering of the sea powers here in 1921.

At the Washington conference Secretary Hughes stirred the emotions by the direct and forceful manner of his diplomacy from the very moment the first session opened. He laid before the astonished delegates of the other powers a complete and sweeping proposal for reduction of naval armaments.

BIG OFFER IN 1921

At London Secretary Stimson proposes a course of quiet, persistent effort, wholly devoid of diplomatic fireworks. He expects none of the other powers to begin negotiations by talking of what they must have for national security, or by sounding any other note which might jar on the sensibilities of any of the conferees.

In 1921 the American government held, so to speak, a handful of trumps in the form of a great battleship fleet. The United States was able to lay on the table a momentous offer to restrict construction.

U. S. IN QUANDARY

But at London in 1930 the United States finds itself behind, rather than ahead, in certain unrestricted classes of warcraft, notably cruisers.

There has been no hint that President Hoover is willing to sacrifice any considerable percentage of the 15-cruiser building program.

The Americans will have offers to make in other directions. They want a holiday in battleship building continued, they would be content with a limitation reducing destroyer strength, and they would like to abandon the submarine altogether.

But the world discussion of naval armament in recent months has thrust the cruiser in the very first rank of controversy, and it is at this very point that the American government finds a positive limit on its ability to offer reduction.

Day of Prayer for Naval Parley Set

New York, Jan. 8 (AP)—Church leaders in the United States and Great Britain have declared Sunday, January 19, as a day of special prayer for the success of the London naval armament reduction conference.

Bishop Francis J. McConnell, president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and Alanson B. Houghton, former ambassador to Great Britain, who is chairman of the council's commission on international justice and good will, signed the call in behalf of the council.

City police his wife had disappeared and he believed she was a victim of murder.

A mutilated body of a woman was later found and an attempt made to identify it as that of Mrs Cliffe, slain in a "perfect" crime.

It later developed that both Mrs Cliffe and her husband had visited in Quincy after the date of her alleged disappearance.

Last night the couple were seen walking on South Illinois ave. by Max C. Swank of that thoroughfare. He told Patrolman Price he overheard Cliffe say, "Well, if I can't have you no one else shall."

A few minutes later under an arc light Cliffe drew a knife which police said he purchased yesterday and drew it across his wife's throat.

At the hospital Mrs. Cliffe lived but a few minutes, despite the efforts of physicians. They sewed up the wounds of her husband and said he would live.

Cliffe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Cliffe of Atlantic and formerly lived in Wollaston.

The young couple moved to Atlantic City some 18 months ago, and since that time have made several visits to his parents.

It was understood the body of the slain woman would be shipped to a home in Newland st., Boston, where she formerly lived.

The couple were married Oct. 4, 1927, in Merrimac, N. H., by the Rev. John Wright. Mrs. Cliffe gave her age as 18, and said her parents were Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert J. Babbitt of Boston.

QUIET BURGLAR GETS $50,000 IN JEWELS

Steals Gems From R. I. Banker's Wife's Bedroom as She Sleeps

Providence, Jan. 8—Gems and jewelry valued at $50,000 were stolen early today from the sleeping chamber of Mrs. Samuel H. Nicholson, wife of the multi-millionaire banker and manufacturer.

The skilled burglar left no fingerprint and so quietly did he work that Mrs. Nicholson, sleeping only a few feet away, was not disturbed.

Mrs. Nicholson told Chief Inspector John Maguire that she and her husband returned from a social fete at midnight and that she retired in her room about 1 a. m.

When the butler went downstairs to begin the day he found that a window in the servant's dining room off the kitchen had been jimmied. He notified Nicholson, who woke his wife.

They discovered the jewelry which she had left out on her dresser, instead of putting it away, to be gone.

Nicholson, in his room across the hall, as well as three maids and the butler, occupying three rooms on the third floor, failed to hear the burglar.

Nicholson is president of the Nicholson File Co. and is chairman of the board of directors of the Industrial Trust Co. The Nicholson home, a three-story mansion, is at 71 George st.

A checkup of the family jewels revealed that among the missing articles also were a $7000 flexible diamond and platinum necklace, a $4500 platinum diamond ring with two diamondas in a sapphire setting, a $4200 platinum diamond bracelet and chain, a $3100 sapphire and diamond bracelet, a $2500 platinum and diamond pin and a $2500 diamond brooch set with a large pearl.

TAYLOR CASE CRISIS NEAR to reveal, and would not have a representative at his questioning.

At the same time word reached here that Mrs. Mabel Whyte made no effort again to interview Henry Peavey, negro housekeeper and cook for Taylor, who was located in Sacramento after being in seclusion since leaving Los Angeles after the crime.

Prosecuting officials were divided on whether the convict Hefner was telling the truth when he said he had knowledge of the mystery came through association in a deputy with Edward Sands, Taylor's former secretary, it was admitted that there were several discrepancies in his statements.

One thing on which Whyte planned to grill Hefner concerned an allegation that the convict told Seattle authorities while under arrest on a grand theft charge in 1922 that five bandits killed the film director in a Los Angeles court bungalow on Feb. 1, 1922.

There was a growing opinion among investigators that Hefner had concocted his story of events in the Taylor mystery from reading newspapers and discussing the crime with other prisoners for the sole purpose of effecting his release from Folsom prison.

Nevertheless, Hefner so convinced the then Governor Friend W. Richardson of the authenticity of his statements that the executive arranged his parole in 1925.

Hefner, who was serving a term at the time for intent to defraud in Orange county, Calif., violated his parole and was sent back to the penitentiary only to be re-paroled in August 1926. Subsequently he again became a parole violator and has been a fugitive ever since.

75 MILLION HUB STREET PLAN

vide three lanes for automobile traffic in each direction, with provisions made for underground parking space and direct entrance to stores and other buildings in the district.

The subway entrance would be in the vicinity of Shawmut ave. and Tremont st and its exit would be at a point beyond Hanover with a link with the proposed East Boston vehicular tunnel.

Both street and tunnel would, of course, parallel Tremont and Washington sts. For the street there would be overpasses constructed at the intersections with West st., Temple pl., Bromfield and School sts. As a matter of illustration, the thoroughfare would be a north and south extension of Province st.

About 850,000 square feet of area, about a mile and a quarter in length, would be taken by right of eminent domain under the plans. Then, if the proposition were privately undertaken with the city's co-operation, the city could sell the land to the syndicate without loss.

The present City Hall and the new B. F. Keith Memorial Theater would be among the many buildings torn down if the plans were made effective.

Strange, barbarous, but it is not so long since, in Christian hands, the insane and the epileptic, supposed to be possessed by evil spirits, were often beaten with horrible brutality, even beaten to death, in an effort to discourage the spirits and drive them out.

Royal Bride Eager for Long Plane Trip

Brussels, Jan. 8 (AP)—The bride of Prince Humbert already has amazed her own country and family by the variety of interests that she brings to her new role as wife of the heir to the Italian throne.

Sports of all kinds always have had a fascination for her, and she has followed in the steps of her father with a keen interest in aviation.

She had a long flight this summer over the Ardennes mountains and was so pleased with the trip that when she landed she said to her friend: "The day I am married I shall ask my husband to take me for a long distance flight?"

Her intimates are now awaiting to see what the young bridegroom will do when his princess asks him to take her airplaning.

Jose Marie has an excellent technical knowledge of planes and is well versed in the differences between the various makes. It has been one of her great disappointments that she has not been able to follow the example of several other young Belgian debutantes and learn to fly. Her royal family would not permit her to take the risk.

The bride's accomplishments in the field of music are known throughout her home country. She used to play the violin, but later transferred her attention to the piano, on which she became very proficient. Quite recently she began a study of the cello.

Unprejudiced music critics were genuinely amazed at her ability when she appeared in a charity program given by the conservatory where she was studying. It was the first, and probably the last, public appearances of Marie Jose as performing musician.

In addition to her ability as a performer she is a deep student of the history of music. She was one of the very few students who passed an examination of the Belgian Musical Union "with high distinction."

Marie Jose's love for the sea and the little royal cottage by the sea at Ostend is proverbial among the fisherfolk along the coast of Belgium. During the busy days of preparation for the wedding, the princess frequently escaped to the solitude of the little cottage where she was born to stroll up and down the beach.

Nine American Women at Royal Wedding

Rome, Italy, Jan. 8—The only Americans who attended the wedding of Princess Marie Jose and Prince Humbert were members of the American embassy staff and their wives. The women were gowned as follows:

Mrs. John W. Garrett, wife of the United States ambassador, cloth of silver shot with blue, with a silver veil and a long court train. The robe was cut in medieval curves, while her head was covered with a rich diadem.

Mrs. R. S. Holmes, wife of the naval attache, green georgette with a green velvet train.

Mrs. J. L. Collins, wife of the military attache, apricot georgette with a train of gold lace.

Mrs. M. M. Mitchell, wife of the commercial attache, white satin and lace with a white velvet train.

Mrs. H. H. Pittan, wife of the second secretary, pink satin, with a train of pink and silver lame, lined with pink satin.

Mrs. Selden Chapin, wife of the third secretary, blue georgette with a silver lame train.

Mrs. A. A. Osborne, wife of the assistant commercial attache, apricot satin with a train of apricot velvet lined with satin.

Mrs. G. E. Lovell, Jr., wife of the army air attache, silver and gold lame with a train of lame.

Mrs. P. N. L. Bellinger, wife of the naval air attache, orchid chiffon with a train of silver cloth.

ACOSTA SENT TO JAIL BY WIFE

The aviator was taken to Mineola today for arraignment after he had spent a night in the town lockup here on the charge of abandonment.

Acosta has been separated from his wife for some time, but last night he decided to visit her home to see his children. When he arrived his wife telephoned police headquarters and had him arrested.

Democrats Banish Sen. Stubbs in Va.

He worked against Alfred E. Smith during the presidential campaign of 1928 and voted for Dr. William Moseley Brown, anti-Smith and Republican nomines for governor last fall.

Stubbs was ousted from the caucus of Democratic senators when 30 members met prior to the opening of the General Assembly. Arrangements were made to have his seat placed next to those of the two Republican members at the convening of the Legislature today.

EDDIE CANTOR Rises to Say:

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 8—A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University, advocates an earlier entrance age for college students and a cutting down to one game a year of intercollegiate sports.

Even at the risk of being spanked, I must disagree with the eminent educator.

First of all, the students who hang around the stage door now are much too youthful and if we get 'em any younger our girls will be accused of "robbing the cradle," which is the worst thing that can be said about a Ziegfeld girl.

Why not find out at what age a boy can "hold" his liquor and drive with one hand?

Passing this test, he would be ready for college.

As for one football game a year—it would ruin the fur industry, which is in a precarious condition already.

Bay State Driver Cleared of Death

Norwalk, Ct., Jan. 8 (AP)—Paul A. Carrier of Leominster, Mass., today officially was absolved from criminal responsibility in the death of Arthur Johnson from injuries suffered Monday when Johnson walked into the side of the truck driven by Carrier.

LOBBY SOUGHT HOOVER'S AID

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—A letter read today before the Senate lobby committee said W. C. D'Arcy, publicity man of the Coca Cola Company, "has a personal method of approach to Hoover and is going to see that Hoover gets full, but concise, data on the sugar subject."

The reference was contained in a letter written by H. H. Pike, Jr., Wall st. sugar broker, to P. A. Staples of Cuba, who is connected with the Central Hershey Company.

Pike, who was on the witness stand, testified his information was received "from someone," but he said he had forgotten who.

Senator Robinson, Indiana, the only regular Republican on the committee, asserted that the letter indicated D'Arcy has "some back stairs way of getting to" the President.

When Pike said he did not know who gave him the information Robinson shouted:

"Then you ought to have kept quiet. This is the purest kind of lobbying."

"I can tell everything now that I knew then," Pike replied.

Robinson asserted that the reference was unfair to the President, but Pike said he understood all that was meant was that D'Arcy either knew Mr. Hoover or could reach him through a friend.

Pike had previously testified that he was directing a fight against a higher duty on sugar in the tariff bill made by the Hershey Company and the Coca Cola Company. He said the companies had arranged to spend as much as $25,000 each in their effort to keep a higher duty from being placed on sugar.

The letter to Staples, dated February 1, said "Bob" Woodruff, president of the Coca Cola Company, "is after me every time he comes up here." It continued:

"He got me down to breakfast yesterday, where he had his advertising man, W. C. d'Arcy; Mr. Hovsey, export vice-president, and Ralph Hayes, publicity vice-president of the Chatham and Phoenix National Bank.

We went over the matter in some detail and ended up this way:

"Mr. D'Arcy has a personal method of approach to Hoover and is going to see that Hoover gets full but concise data on the sugar subject.

"It is his belief that Hoover will oppose the sugar matter and see that it doesn't go through, in view of the Latin-American complications that would most seriously arise. He thinks this point should be stressed.

"They believe that as much publicity as possible should be secured in order that those in Congress and Mr. Hoover will have something to fall back on if they act contrary to the wishes of the domestic producers.

"Mr. Woodruff apparently is leaving it to me to see that there is some organizing of this publicity work, and has said that if the United State Sugar Association would take the matter up, he would be willing to subscribe funds to help the thing along, though on what scale I do not know."

Pike said it had been estimated the House sugar rate would increase the cost of sugar from $350,000,000 to $375,000,000 a year.

"Any raise that is put on is paid by the buyer of sugar," Pike said, adding that if the rate were made high enough it would be a "bonanza" to raise sugar in the United States.

Prohibition Letters Flood Treasury Mail

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—The Treasury mail sack is bulging nowadays with letters on prohibition—suggestions for improvement in enforcement, bitter attacks on the government and its policy, letters of praise and tips on where violations of the law are occurring.

Prohibition has always been a favorite subject for letter writers, but a chart showing a graph of their volume would register a sharp ascent since the current prohibition row began.

Treasury officials said today that while scurrilous abuse of enforcement officers was contained in some of the anonymous letters, the majority of messages received indicated approval of the government's policy.

Ministers Offer Rum Law Evidence

Norwalk, Ct., Jan. 8 (AP)—To aid the prosecuting attorney in enforcement of the prohibition law, the Norwalk Ministers Association today offered to supply that officer with information as to violations of the law.

BIGELOW BOND IS FORFEITED

New Haven, Ct., Jan. 8—Francis H. Bigelow, 52, ex-Harvard track captain and member of a prominent Boston and Worcester family, has forfeited a bond of $2000 provided by his wife to guarantee his appearance here on a charge of theft, it was learned today.

Bigelow, charged with the larceny of valuable antiques from shore cottages near Madison, is believed to be an inmate of a retreat for the insane near Hartford.

His arrest last winter and subsequent arraignment in Milford town court for trial in superior court caused a sensation.

Bigelow, who was captain of the Harvard track team a quarter of a century ago and was considered wealthy, denied stealing the antiques which were found in Worcester by state troopers.

The defendant declared he had purchased the antiques from a man who offered them to him in a truckload of articles for $150.

The former athlete collapsed on the first day set for the hearing and was taken to a New Haven hospital. The courtroom was crowded with society people from New York, Boston and Worcester, a number of the spectators having been among those whose homes were looted.

Bigelow, after being treated for heart trouble, was taken to New York under bonds and later to the sanitarium, according to report.

Card Reader Held in Gem Theft Case

Louis Latais, known as "Karam Bey," a card reader, was held in $500 for the grand jury in Municipal Court today on charges of breaking and entering and larceny from Mrs. Ethel Madigan, another card reader know nas "Madam Anthony."

Latais is alleged to have stolen three diamond rings and $125 from Mrs. Madigan's Huntington ave. apartment. Latais informed Judge Murray he had an appointment with Justice Wilfred Gray to discuss a newspaper article following a recent trial in Superior Court. Judge Murray said the justice could issue a writ of habeas if he deemed the conference important enough, and refused Latais his liberty in lieu of bail.

The family bought a parrot in a Baltimore store before Christmas, and the bird became ill and died on Christmas Day.

AIR NOTABLES AT EAST COAST DEDICATION

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

The dedication exercises of East Coast Aircraft Corp.'s new building at the Boston Airport, Saturday night, takes on a more nation-wide aspect as the days go by, an announcement made by Frank LeMan, sales manager of the company, indicates.

Frank is right now the busiest man in the world with the plans for that gala occasion.

Officials, and by that we mean the big boys, of Wright Aeronautical Corp., Keystone-Loening Corp., and Travel Air have been sent invitations, and there is a big possibility of a very fast commercial airplane making the trip from New York, although there is nothing definite about this part of the show.

Such men as Walter Beech, president of Travel Air, and also president of the Curtiss-Wright Sales Corp.; A. P. Loening, vice-president and designer of the famous Loening amphibian; Bruce Leighton, director of sales for Wright Aeronautical; C. M. Lucas, manager of service of Wright, and Edgar Gott, president of Keystone-Loening, have been invited, to name a few, and when these men arrive, it will look like a national air meet.

Heads of all the commercial flying companies in Boston are on the list, so are Army flyers, State Supervisor of Aviation Robert L. O'Brien and Federal Inspector Jack Moran. Airport Super Eddie Edson will be on deck, and various city officials will also attend.

About 1000 official announcements of the opening of the building are being sent out to all flying companies in New England and points north, south, east and west, telling the world that East Coast's new structure will be open to the public for inspection Sunday, January 12, from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. This means that the general public can look the whole plant over, including H. E. "Wally" Wallis' sanctum, the motor overhaul shop, which is a rare favor, we assure you.

More about this gala occasion later in the week.

SHACK OWNERSHIP

When we wrote about the old hangar in the middle of the field, we misrepresented the owner of same when quoting Park Commissioner William P. Long's statement about the agreement having been reached between his department and owners of the hangar.

The shack is owned by the Boston Airport Development Corp., and has nothing to do with East Coast Aircraft, as we stated. However, this does not mean that the hangar has any business right in the center of the field, so get it out of the way, someone, somehow before something happens that won't look nice in headlines in every paper in town.

Despite the fact that this section of the country is none too cold, the thought that old man winter will descend in all his fury at any moment is causing Freddie Desjardin to start southward Saturday of this week in Fred Thayer's Stearman, Whirlwind powered.

Desjardin dropped in for a moment in the ship, with his younger brother, Lucien doing the flying, and told us that they were out on a cross-country flight, and had just come from Concord, N. H., where they paid a short visit with Bob Fogg and his gang.

Thayer, the owner of the ship, is in a hospital in Worcester recovering from injuries received in an automobile bus crash some weeks ago, but is expected to be released from said hospital in time to join Freddie in the trip to Miami.

Well, there's another one of the gang going down where the sun is always shining. This will be a purely pleasure trip, however, with Freddie and Fred having a whale of a time.

Say hello to Charlie Arnold and Val Chick for us, if you meet them, Freddie.

CINDER WALK NEEDED

We think the city of Boston should install a cinder walk for the folks who use the trolley cars to the end of the line at Jeffries Point, and walk over to the airport. The port may have grown up in size and facilities for flying, but the space between Maverick st. and the commercial buildings is still more or less of a quagmire.

A couple of loads of cinders, well placed would do the trick, and save the boys and girls who visit and work at the airport a lot of muddy feet and soiled trouser legs.

Here's another funny one. "Eddie" Edson and Weather Man A. D. Ross are planning a control of the winds, so that there will be a 60-mile wind blowing at 1000 feet and up, in every direction of the compass. By means of this splendid thought, the pilot may take-off, climb to an altitude where he will find a tail wind, and be shot along to his destination like a bullet.

But the boys must have their fun.

After a two months' tour of Europe, in which he flew every possible plane, and had a ride in the Dornier DO-X, Harold Moon is back on the airport greeting the boys.

DAY BAKER HITS BILL TO GOVERN BUS TRAFFIC

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—Opposition to the Parker bill to regulate motor buses in interstate commerce was expressed before the Congressional Interstate Commerce Committee today by Day Baker, representative of a number of New England lines.

Mr. Baker contended that enactment of the measure would in no way serve the public interest and that it would eliminate competition.

He recommended that enactment be deferred for a year or two to permit development of carriers in remote parts of the country, where, he said, individual initiative would start lines where large protected carriers would not.

The committee planned to hear opponents of the proposed legislation first, and then one witness representing its proponents.

George H. Pride of the Pride Transportation Company, Brooklyn, N. Y., representing the Board of Trade of New York, opposed the bill in its entirety.

Submission of the bill in its present form, Pride asserted, was an "unparalleled effrontry." He called attention to the very rapidly growing "control of motor bus lines" by railroads. As they grew, he said, the railroads organized their invasion of the carrier field, and began to buy them.

He said he had heard "but one instance of need of regulation—a bus which ran into the desert and abandoned its passengers." Pride added that present regulation was sufficient.

A SMOOTHER, FASTER, BETTER SIX

LABOR IS TO ACT ON PROBLEM OF MUSICIANS

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 8 (AP)—The problem of some 8000 theater musicians displaced by "canned music" was to come before the executive council of the American Federation of Labor at a 10 day conference here.

The fact that one-fourth of the 32,000 theater musicians of the country had been thrown out of work by machine-made music was disclosed here by Joseph N. Weber of New York, head of the American Federation of Musicians and eighth vice-president of the Federation of Labor.

While admitting that the mechanical music presented a serious problem to his organization, Mr. Weber was optimistic for the future of musicians.

"Although machine-made music so far has made a great inroad on organized musicians throughout the country," he said, "I think it has about reached its saturation point. Already people are voicing their desire for a return of orchestras to the theaters.

"They want the music that is possible only through human talent that they can see and hear."

The executive council, composed of President Green, Secretary Frank Morrison, Treasurer Martin F. Ryan and eight vice-presidents, also is expected to discuss world peace, child labor, injunctions and unemployment problems.

Reveals New Way to Treat Ulcers

Worcester, Jan. 8—Dr. George W. Crile of Cleveland, chairman of the board of regents of the American College of Surgeons, advanced a new theory for the treatment of ulcers of the stomach at the New England sectional meeting of the American College of Surgeons here.

Dr. Crile explained that about a year ago he found a case, he said, in which a man suffered from both hyper-thyroidism and stomach ulcers. He said that an operation was performed for the thyroid ailments and it was discovered that the symptoms of the stomach ulcers disappeared. Since that time he has performed several similar operations, he said.

Spanish Barbers in Business Slump

Madrid, Jan. 8—Business is poor for the barbers in Seville and elsewhere in Spain. The Madrid Association of Barber Shop Employes has warned those in other cities it is no use seeking relief in the capital; folks here also are letting their whiskers grow or cutting them themselves.

Louella Parsons Weds

And He's President of Big University

New York, Dec. 8—Sundry folks have been writing to the papers about the grammar of Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University. In the course of a radiocast speech on the League of Nations he said:

"Neutrality don't involve breaking your obligation."

Shock Fatal to Bay State Politician

Springfield, Jan. 8 (AP)—Francis W. Aldrich, member of the Governor's executive council from 1920 until his retirement last year, to become candidate for sheriff of Hampden County, died today in his home here after suffering a paralytic shock. He was 58 years old.

CAPES NAMED AFTER BYRD, MAWSON

By CAPTAIN SIR HUBERT WILKINS

Commander of the Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic Expedition.

(Copyrighted, 1929, by the New York American and Universal Service, Inc. Copyright in Great Britain, France, Germany and all other countries. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

Deception Island, Antarctica, Jan. 8 (Via S. S. Melville and KUP, San Francisco Examiner wireless station.)—Back again in the steamship Melville's comfortable steam-heated cabin, we have had time to work out courses and angles and to plot approximately our discoveries on what heretofore had been blank spaces on the Antarctic charts.

Flying at 120 miles an hour, one cannot pretend to fix positions as accurately as would a city engineer, and even the camera's keen, yet flattering lens eye shows only flat lines where nothing but unspecked whiteness confronts it.

It would require stereoscopic vision to discern from an altitude the outlines of the snow-blanketed great southland.

Our preliminary surveys are but reconnaissances, yet we feel sure that in general they are fairly correct. The north coast of Charcot land we fixed five miles south of its charted position, a remarkable coincidence considering that Charcot plotted it from about 50 miles away.

Charcot's three peaks are conspicuous. Between Martine peak the coastline trends southeastward. The most easterly point is about longitude 73, 30, latitude 71, 20.

The cape where the coast turns more south, then west, is rounded, but conspicuous enough to deserve a name, and I suggest that it be named Cape Mawson after my contemporary fellow-countryman explorer, Sir Douglas Mawson.

The conspicuous cape at latitude 70, longitude 78, west of Monique Peak, I would like to be known as Cape Byrd, in honor of my friend, now Read-Admiral Byrd, who successfully carried on in both north and south.

The land south to 80 degrees west longitude, bordering on Hearst Land, which was discovered last year, might well, I think be included in that group.

Two islands, one small and one large, which we sighted eastward at about longitude 70, and below latitude 70, are possibly the most westerly of a group of uncertain number named Finley Islands last year in honor of Dr. Finley, president of the American Geographical Society.

Another small island, charted in more northerly latitudes during our trip, were located by Capt. Shannon of the steamer William Scoresby and his navigator, Lieut. Milward.

VIRGINIA RICE MAKES BOW TONIGHT

THIS IS PROVING TO BE A very gay week for the debs. A dance has been scheduled for every night except Friday. PROFESSIONAL WOMEN'S CLUB

A New Year's message from Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller was read over the radio from station WEEI during a broadcast sponsored by the Professional Women's Club of Boston.

Mrs. Fuller said in part:

"I am happy to improve this opportunity to wish each and every one a happy and successful New Year. As a dear friend said to me the other day: 'May 1930 be the happiest year you have ever known and the worst you will ever know.'

"Our country is indeed the land of opportunity unequaled by any nation on the face of the whole earth, and our privileges it is to hold high the torch and to uphold the high standards of right thinking and right living, to which our Pilgrim forefathers dedicated this Republic.

"The people of the United States under the able and efficient leadership of our great President, Herbert Hoover, can look forward to the coming year with a feeling of gratitude and confidence for the peace and prosperity of our beloved land and its individual citizens.

"It is my earnest hope and my firm belief that we will so conduct our public affairs and our individual lives as to be counted worthy of the manifold blessings and opportunities to which we have fallen heir through the noble sacrifices and unselfish efforts of the great leaders of our nation through the years, and thus insure to our children and our children's children a continuance of those ideas and ideals which have made America a nation of which we are so justly proud."

New Glass and Metal Accents Light Up the Scheme

YOU may call yourself unsympathetic with modernism as you have seen it developed up to date. You may say it is interesting but "not for you." But if these are your sentiments it is likely that you have not yet become fully aware of the inspired things being done with metal and glass.

Picture some of the pieces now to be described, in your home, where they would reside appropriately no matter how few your concessions to modernism. They are simple, lovely things with beauty and practicalness to their credit.

A WALL table uses the smart half-round shapes for its top surface and shelves. These are of black glass, and the supports are of brass, silver finish or chromium plate, according to preference.

A striking console table is entirely constructed of chromium plated metal and black bakelite. An exceedingly convenient occasional table has three circular shelves of glass and frame of chromium plate.

A DELIGHTFUL decoration for either hall or living room is a hanging rack whose glass shelves are supported by slender glass columns, whose back and arch top are mirrored and whose sides are silver leafed to simulate aluminum.

You will enjoy serving from a three-legged coffee table, distinctive in its combination of Monel metal, bronze and black bakelite. A little smoking table with triangular shelves of black glass and supports of brass, silver or chromium plated metal would look so well beside that plain and substantial comfort chair!

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

IN the days when Victor Herbert turned his genius upon "Naughty Marietta" and "Mlle. Modiste" folks called such things comic opera. In this round of tuneful revivals at the Majestic, the playgoer is made to understand, in considerable measure, how backward the theater has become in musical entertainment since the passing of Herbert.

• • •

IN "Mlle. Modiste," which may seem a bit old fashioned to the surging sophomores of this generation, you are quickly taken in hand by fond memories of older and brighter days That is your thrill and your recompense. Comic operas may grow up into bold, restless musical comedies but we are not exactly ready to concede total impotency to the young sters. If "Mlle. Modiste," in advancing age, shows a diminishing speed, as such items are now figured, its naughty exuberance remains untouched.

Nicholas Young

• • •

FOR this, the playgoer may pay his tribute to Victor Herbert. Comic opera background is not greatly different from that of musical comedy: merely a hop, skip and jump from the horse and buggy to six or eight purring cylinders under a polished hood. It is generally the old stuff jazzed up for new customers, and the melodies of Herbert stay young; they live and grow from year to year, from decade to decade and from generation to generation. It is the Herbertian quality that convinces you simply Mlle. Modiste snaps its fingers at the passing of years.

• • •

IF there is magic in the name of Herbert and the music shops will be glad to settle any doubt on that score, there is also something fetching in the name of Fritzi Scheff, who again becomes the vivacious Fifi of "Mlle. Modiste." Who, among the gay boys of before the war (World War, of course), will ever forget "Kiss Me Again" as Miss Scheff sang it? At the Majestic you hear the same song again, by the same mellow voice. She is compelled to repeat it many times before her audience is satisfied.

• • •

WITH commendable thoroughness, the Shuberts have gone into production and personnel. For good and sensible reasons, "Mlle. Modiste" returns in revival smartly dressed in the modes of the hour. Even an Albertina Rasch group of high stepping dancers are employed to excellent purpose. A chorus selected for voice, if not figure, does full justice to every concerted number.

• • •

IT is often reported that the theater is in a bad way; that its wares are unsalable and that producers have exhausted themselves chasing new and fruitless ideas. In one corner of the Majestic flung institution, however, "Mlle. Modiste" appears to have solved the problem. Now we can see clearly what Victor Herbert meant to the American theater and its patient patrons.

ALICE DAY

'LOVE PARADE' FOR LOVERS

ARE you one of the gay, happy persons who has announced your intentions of joining the delightful love parade?

Now, "the love parade" is composed of those blissful couples who are married or couples who have recently announced their intentions of marrying. If you have announced your engagement or filed your intentions you are in for a double amount of happiness, for as members of the season's "love parade" managers of both the Uptown and Washington St. Olympia Theaters extends to you a cordial invitation to see and hear Maurice Chevalier in Paramount's "Love Parade," which will be shown at the Olympia and Uptown the week starting next Friday.

So, if you are one of those fortunate couples whose engagements or marriage intentions were announced, simply telephone to or visit "The Love Parade" manager at the Washington St. Olympia Theater and you will be given two tickets for this, the playgoer may pay his tribute to Victor Herbert. Comic opera background is not greatly different from that of musical comedy: merely a hop, skip and jump from the horse and buggy to six or eight purring cylinders under a polished hood. It is generally the old stuff jazzed up for new customers, and the melodies of Herbert stay young; they live and grow from year to year, from decade to decade and from generation to generation. It is the Herbertian quality that convinces you simply Mlle. Modiste snaps its fingers at the passing of years.

ETHEL SHUTTA has been talking business with Arthur Hornblow. What business, you ask. Well, if you saw "Whoopee" you will remember she played one of the important roles opposite Eddie Cantor. Naturally, Eddie would just love to have her in the same pair and she is now discussing terms and what have you, all pending the return of Samuel Goldwyn, of course, from Europe. No one ever signs anything until Sam okays it.

HERE are a few little interesting bits of news: Gilbert Emery, well known and splendid actor, has opened a florist shop at Canyon and Franklin. Nancy Carroll and a handsome young man sailing away for Honolulu, a week or so ago. The handsome young man was her husband, Jack Kirkland, and when they return Mr. Kirkland will join the writing staff of Paramount. He was a former newspaper man and is a well known playwright. Another interesting piece of news is word that Frank Reicher has signed a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Mr. Reicher is a linguist of no mean ability

LON CHANEY SCORNS TALKIES IN NEXT SCREEN ROLE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service
(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service.)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 8.—There are just two actors in the film world who will continue, come what may, to make silent pictures. Charlie Chaplin is one of them. Lon Chaney is the other.

Lon Chaney cannot be induced to even consider a talkie. I wonder why? His next for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be sans Chaney's voice but it will have sound. I mean by synchronization.

"Sergt. Bull," an original story by Hans Kraly, has been chosen for the bizarre personality of Mr. Chaney. Fred Niblo, who will direct, is also writing the adaptation which I gather is partly laid in Great Britain. This is a theme of war in Africa. If Chaney continues to be as big a hit in the silent as he has been in the past all I can say is that he is some popular star.

"THREE FACES EAST," Anthony Kelly's sole successful contribution to the stage, has been purchased by the Fox company. I say sole contribution, because Tony Kelly started out as one of the most promising young authors and playwrights, and as far as I know he has never done anything else worthy of comment. O. H. P. Garrett has been borrowed from Paramount to write the adaptation for "Three Faces East" and it is to be produced sometime soon. Wonder if Tony Kelly will be coming to Hollywood. He started in the movies and first he was associated at the Essanay Company at the time I read scenarios at the rate of 50 a day. Then he moved on to New York and established himself with Famous Players.

THE Duncans are returning. How do I know? A little snooping about at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer gave me an inkling, for their next musical comedy is now going into preparation. Joseph Franklin Poland is writing it and it will all be ready for Rosetta and Vivian when they return from their vaudeville tour. If I know Rosetta I won't go on as written. That girl has ideas and she doesn't hesitate to express herself. That is nothing again' her at that for it takes ideas to make the wheels go round.

• • •

NEW YORK is going to have a treat next week and a treat is what I mean, Jean Hersholt goes to New York for the opening of "Mamba" and since he is one of the most modest and retiring of men and does not force himself unnecessarily, he will be sure to get a welcome. Al Nogels, director, will accompany him. Mr. Hersholt is staying only long enough to attend the opening for he has to begin work on his next picture, "Viennese Nights" for Warner Brothers.

• • •

WHAT is the matter with Marcel De Sano? He always gets right up to the point of directing a picture and then nothing happens. Marcel was slated to put on a picture for Paramount. Months passed and not a camera turned. I finally grew curious. Where was De Sano's picture? He had been under contract to Paramount for months and never so much as directed a single scene. A few years ago Samuel Goldwyn gave him a contract and no one ever heard of it. Then Sano-Goldwyn picture. De Sano, I was told, left Hollywood on a moment's notice, flying eastward with the intention of joining his wife, Arlette Marchal in Paris. No, De Sano won't going to direct for Paramount. Strange, isn't it?

HONORS FOR NEWSREEL

THE 1929 honor roll of "The Nation," announced in the January 8 issue, awards an honorarium to The Embassy, the Newsreel Theater. "The Nation" bestows this distinction upon individuals and firms who, in public service, the arts, sciences, drama or other fields, have distinguished themselves during the past year."

"Eva La Gallienne, for her increasingly successful direction of the Civic Repertory Theater in New York City.

"Elmer Rice, for 'Street Scene,' a prize-winning play in which realism, satire and melodrama are all made to contribute to great theatrical effectiveness.

"Preston Sturges, for enlivening an otherwise dull season with 'Strictly Dishonorable,' a delightful trifle which approaches the ideal of pure comedy without ceasing to preserve the flavor of contemporary American life.

BANNER YEAR MOVIELAND'S FORECAST

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

THROUGH the morning hours today Boston's Who's, Who in filmdom made merry in the main ballroom and foyer of the Copley Plaza. The occasion was the 20th anniversary jubilee banquet of the Boston Moving Picture Machine Operators Union, local 182; and among the guests were not only about all the Hub screen business folk, but also persons of national note.

It just had to be early today, because of the nature of show business. So it happened that midnight saw the start of a mammoth program of entertainment by stage talent, followed by dancing. Then came the banquet at which President Thad C. Barrows, chief projectionist at the Met and head of the union, acted as master of ceremonies. Hours of the past, present and future angle of the industry was touched on and from a number of authoritative mouths came the word that 1930 is destined to see the movies advance by leaps and bounds.

Bigger and better pictures, new inventions touching on the marvelous, were outlined by various speakers. A comprehensive story of the past, present and future, was given by Nathan Gold, who came from the Department of commerce at Washington as the representative of the national Government, State and city were also represented.

An outstanding feature was the showing made by local 182, both in the lavish entertainment offered and the tributes paid to its membership and long record of activity by the speakers. More than 700 persons attended, representing every branch of the film industry.

After President Barrows had sounded the keynote of the gathering, these spoke: Atty-Gen. Joseph E. Warner, representing Gov. Frank G. Allen; J. J. Fitzgibbons, director of Public Theaters for New England and New York; Pres. George E. Giles of the Associated Theater Managers; Sen. Joseph Mulhern; Harry Campbell, New England manager for Fox Film; Col. Sydney H. Cliff and James Sherrin of the motion picture division of the Department of Public Safety; Everett Regan, Greater Boston inspector of films; Pres. Nathan Sidd of Boston C. L. U.; James R. Cameron, author and sound engineer; F. H. Richardson, author and expert on projection; P. A. Maguire, manufacturer; Samuel Kaplan, Harry Rubin, Judge William Day, International President William Canavan of the union; Business Representative James F. Burke of the union, and many others.

Mr. Fitzgibbon lauded the operators as the key men in the showing of films; and he said it was a tribute to them that picture and sound reproduction in New England was better than anywhere in the United States.

On behalf of the local, Judge Day presented the following checks for meritorious service to the organization: $1000 to James F. Burke; $500 to President Barrows; other checks to Vice President Meyer Bixgorne, Treasurer Joseph Rosen, Inspector of the Rosen law; Financial Secretary Albert R. Moulton, and other officers and members of the executive board.

The program was arranged by a committee headed by Joseph S. Cifre, who deserves highest praise for the excellence of the entertainment throughout.

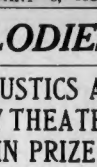
Police Siren 'Props' for Mystery Play

It was a tense moment. Seemingly murder had just been done in the course of "The House of Fear" at the Plymouth. Just as the lights went out there was the scream of an ambulance siren through Stuart st. the lights flashed on again; the body of the supposedly slain man was gone. Life itself sometimes provides queer coincidences which even dramatic critics would pronounce impossible.

ACOUSTICS AT TINY THEATER WIN PRIZE

THE smallest theater in Boston has just won a signal honor. To Andersen's Theater in Mattapan sq. has been awarded a bronze plaque in recognition of the excellent sound production in the playhouse. The plaque, just received by Arthur Andersen, proprietor and manager, together with a letter from J. M. Sheck, managing editor of the Motion Picture Exhibitors Herald-World, is inscribed as follows: "A Mark of Honor Has Been Awarded This Theater for the High Quality of Its Reproduction of Sound Pictures—by Exhibitors Herald-World." In the letter Mr. Shreck writes: "It is my sincere hope the presentation of the award of merit to the Andersen will instill a desire in your employes to continue to give the public of Mattapan excellent motion picture entertainment."



Arthur Anderson

The Award of Merit idea started several months ago and already awards have been made in a number of cities.

PORTER NAMED NEW CADILLAC EXECUTIVE

H. M. Stephens, general sales manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Co., announces the appointment of Hugh T. Porter as assistant general sales manager to direct the merchandising activities and the development of a new division in the sales department made necessary by the advent of the new Cadillac V-16.

Mr. Porter has been selected to develop this new department due to his long experience in the executive high price field.

Mr. Porter entered the industry in 1911 as assistant sales manager for the Locomobile Co., remaining in this position until 1915.

In 1915 he became associated with Mr. I. M. Upperci, distributor of Cadillac cars in New York and vicinity. As general sales manager for the Upperca Cadillac Corp. he made many valuable contributions to the rapidly expanding demand for exclusive custom body creations. At that time the Cadillac Motor Car Co. made no custom bodies but in order to reach this exclusive clientile furnished chassis to distributors and coach builders. Mr. Upperci maintained a large custom body plant of his own and during Mr. Porter's connection with the company until 1920 had the distinction of conducting one of the largest volume custom body operations in the country.

WOMEN CHOOSE FAMILY CARS

New York, Jan. 8 (AP)—The increasing influence of the women folks in selection and purchase of the family car was a subject of comment today at the 13th annual national automobile show.

Women made up about half of the crowds at the show, officials estimated, and displayed lively interest not only in line and finish, upholstery fabrics and appointments but also asked intelligent questions about engine and brake performance.

Feminine preference in finish, salesmen said, seemed to be for the more subdued shades, although harmonizing tones attracted much attention.

Sales Records of Chrysler Accurate

A complete record of every Chrysler car sold is maintained in the factory offices in Detroit. The purchaser's name, address, occupation, date of purchase and name of dealer and salesmen handling the transaction, are filed with the car model, serial number and engine number. It requires but 20 minutes to obtain complete information on any Chrysler car sold in the United States. This information is mutually beneficial to all Chrysler owners, and has been a factor in the reduction of insurance rates on Chrysler cars in various parts of the country.

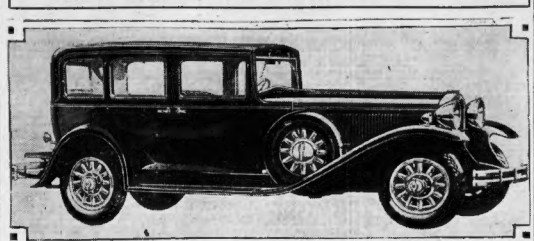
For Long Life and Satisfactory Usage

Satisfactory operation and long life in a motor are dependent on the correct alignment of cylinders, bearings and other working parts at all times, say Cadillac engineers. This alignment can only be secured with a crankcase of great strength and rigidity. The crankcase of the new Cadillac V-16 meets these requirements with a minimum of weight. It is cast from silicon-aluminum alloy which has a strength to weight ratio of twice that of an iron casting.

New Cadillac Landau

Here is the five-passenger Imperial Landau by Fleetwood—one of the smart, individual custom body styles which will grace the new 16-cylinder Cadillac. Features of this body type are the narrow front pillars, the V-shaped windshield and the low streamlines.

New Hupp Has Unusual Features



Down-draft carburetion and radiator cooled oil, used for the first time in American motor car industry, are among the features of the new Hupp series Eight Sedan, powered by the new 133-horse power Hupmobile engine. Its power, speed, acceleration and hill climbing ability are a revelation.

HUPP PRESENTS ANOTHER '8'

Entering 1930 with two of the most successful models it has ever produced—a 70 horse power six in the $1000 group, and a 100 horse power eight in the medium priced field—the Hupp Motor Car Corporation springs a complete surprise on the motor car industry, says Eric Courtney, general manager Hupmobile Co.

The surprise is another new eight—one of if not the most powerful production-built cars in America. Although some of the larger dealers throughout the country had previously held private showings, the first public announcement was made at the opening of the National Automobile Show in Grand Central Palace. The unexpectedness of the new Hupmobile Eight is the more surprising since Hupmobile has usually displayed but two complete lines of cars.

Now with the super-powered eight, the products of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation include four chassis lengths. Of these cars, four body types are found in the "R" Six Series, six in the "C" Eight Series, five in the new high powered eight and two in the model "U" just announced.

$400,000 Chrysler Building Now Open

A new building, costing $400,000, devoted exclusively to the merchandising of used cars, is now open for inspection at 756-757 Commonwealth ave. This building is part of the huge expansion program being carried out by C. E. Fay of the C. E. Fay company, Chrysler, Plymouth, and Fargo Truck distributors.

The building occupies 42,000 square feet of floor space, 14,000 square feet per floor, with a 450-foot frontage on Commonwealth ave.

The total valuation of the Fay property, devoted entirely to Chrysler products, is $1,300,000. On display on the first floor is an old Maxwell car, 28 years old. This car sets majestically on a raised platform in the back of the room on the first floor.

Hints for Repair of Spark Plugs

If the insulator of a spark plug is covered with dry black soot: clean plug, check carburetor setting for being too rich and use choke sparingly. If sooting of insulator is habitual, change to hotter plug.

If insulator is covered with wet, soft carbon, clean or replace plug; check oil level for being too high or for oil dilution and pistons and rings may need attention.

CHEVROLET OUT FOR RECORD

The Chevrolet Motor Co. announces a new car for 1930, known as "The Greatest Chevrolet in Chevrolet History."

Announcement of the new car comes right at the close of Chevrolet's greatest year, for success of the six-cylinder Chevrolet, introduced just a year ago, resulted in an output of 1,350,000 cars this year, breaking by a wide margin all former Chevrolet annual production records.

In making public Chevrolet's plans for 1930, H. J. Walsh, Boston zone manager, Chevrolet Motor Co., declared that with the improvements incorporated in the new car, Chevrolet was anticipating a volume of business that will equal, if not surpass, the phenomenal record of 1929. And, in order to accommodate an early demand, production is being speeded with all the haste consistent with the precision methods for which Chevrolet manufacturing operations are famous.

New car shipments have been going out to dealers for the past 10 days, with deliveries to owners scheduled to start today. The cars went on display this morning in thousands of Chevrolet showrooms from coast to coast, while at the same time the announcement of the new car was being broadcast through the advertising columns of more than 6500 newspapers.

OAKLAND NOW IN '8' FIELD

Recent rumors of new developments in the Oakland-Pontiac line for 1930 found ample basis with the first display of the latest products of the Oakland Motor Car Co., says Dwight Hersey, general manager Oakland Motor Co. of New England.

While retaining its established position in the six-cylinder field with the new series Pontiac Big Six which presents many mechanical refinements, the company now has entered the eight-cylinder field with a moderate-priced, high-powered type Oakland that offers new peaks of power, speed and acceleration. The new Oakland is the only motor car in its price field powered with a "V" engine.

Developed during three years of intensive experiment and research, the sturdy compact new Oakland engine employs many new but thoroughly proved principles of design which enable it to establish remarkable standards of performance.

States Permit Greater Speed

Since 1910 the average automobile speed allowance for rural districts of the United States has been increased from 20 miles per hour to 38 miles per hour and the tendency toward revision is constantly upward. Five states already have abolished the fixed speed limit and others are preparing similar legislation.

Paris Bans Auto Horns in Night

Use of the automobile horn in Paris, France, is practically forbidden at night. Drivers must operate their cars at night in such manner that horn blowing is not necessary.

HOOVER WANTS BETTER HOMES CONFERENCE

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—With scrapbook reports of 5960 communities piled high on his table, Secretary Wilbur today was ready to see America, with his better homes committee, in terms of tin cans cleared from back yards, dilapidated fences torn down, new houses erected and old house made new.

The better homes committee is one of the mantles that shifted from the broad shoulders of the President to the tall shoulders of his Secretary of the Interior when Mr. Hoover went into the White House.

But the President's interest in improved small homes is still so keen that he indicated his intention of calling a conference on that subject when the more pressing child health conference had been concluded.

Wilbur did not hesitate to say that small house architecture in American towns in the past has been "wretched" and that people are only beginning to realize that harm in the home environment may be achieved at small cost.

"Boy-built houses," constructed by high school carpentry classes in which lads were taught proper taste in home ownership, were featured. Girl scout "little houses," modelled after the Girl Scout headquarters in Washington, also received considerable attention.

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up a stubborn, lingering cough. It takes but a moment to prepare and costs little, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that follow severe cold epidemics.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe and heal the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, but also it is absorbed into the blood, and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of distressing coughs, chest colds, and bronchial troubles.

JEWS WILL AID DEVELOPMENT OF SPAIN

(This is the second of two articles revealing the details of the plans to open the gates of Spain for the Jews of eastern Europe, based on an exclusive interview with one of the leaders of the movement.)

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1930, by International News Service.)

New York, Jan 8—Within the next few days Premier Primo De Rivera, of Spain, will discuss with his cabinet the formal revocation of the ancient edict expelling the Jews. It was issued in 1492 by Ferdinand and Isabella.

It is one of the paradoxes of history that the year in which saw the discovery of the great land of opportunity across the seas should exile a race from the country where it had enjoyed one of its happiest cultural periods.

"When the Jews are permitted to return to Spain it will mark one of the greatest romances of history," said Dr. S Margoshes, editor of the Jewish Day, and one of the leaders behind the movement for the migration to Spain of the Jews of Eastern Europe.

"For when the Jews were expelled from Spain in the days of Christopher Columbus, they took the oath never to return to Spain again. The 300 years before the expulsion was the 'Golden Age of Jewish history in which were produced scientists, philosophers and writers, not least of them being Spinoza.

"The descendants of these exiled Spanish Jews have never forgotten their Spanish homeland. Through the centuries of their exile it has been a case of separated lovers and a great longing for the land of their greatest cultural glory. There are 70,000 to 80,000 Spanish Jews in Europe today, most of them still speaking the pure Castilian tongue.

"That is the sentimental side of the movement. But, of course, most of the potential immigrants will go to Spain for economic reasons.

Dr. Margoshes estimated that there were at least a million Jews in Russia, Poland and Roumania who would migrate, if given the opportunity, on account of economic distress and political persecution.

"The advantages to both sides are very clear of the potential bargain to be reached between the Spanish Government and the Jewish race," said Dr. Margoshes. "It means that the Jews will find a place where they can make a living free from persecution.

"As for Spain, she will receive a virility and enlivening of her economic life through such a migration. And the result is bound to enhance her commercial relations with the rest of the world.

"Millions of dollars will be poured into Spain to assist the new immigrants in building factories and in other industrial projects which may give them employment. We plan to raise a $10,000,000 international fund for this purpose.

"In addition, $60,000,000 is sent each year from the United States to Europe by American relatives of European Jews. A good part of this sum is certain to be sent to the Jewish immigrants in Spain. Hence, the commercial ties between Spain and the United States will be strengthened."

Byrd Lauds J. D., Jr., in Plea for Shrines

Richmond, Va., Jan. 8—Addressing the General Assembly when it convened in biennial session today, Governor Harry F. Byrd said the work being done at Williamsburg by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is proof that the great spirit from Virginia's past touches the imagination and moves men.

"He is spending millions to restore Williamsburg as she was when royal governors sat in the palace and young men destined to greatness gathered in the Raleigh tavern," said the governor.

"To the fortunate fact that Mr. Rockefeller has creative imagination the world will owe the unique creation in modern times of an entire town as it existed before America had achieved her independence and before Yorktown was more than the name of an indistinguished place. Williamsburg lies almost midway between Jamestown and Yorktown. At the one, English civilization was first established permanent in America; at the other, the independence declared in Jefferson's words was made a fact by Washington's sword.

"We have included in the budget an appropriation toward the purchase of Jamestown. It should be acquired and preserved in cooperation with the national Government, and Yorktown should certainly be acquired and preserved by the nation in co-operation with the citizens and friends of Virginia.

"I like to feel that it is one of my last acts as governor to express to Mr. Rockefeller the appreciation of Virginia not only for his generosity but also for the greatness of spirit and high imagination he has shown in recapturing from the past a place that will be a patriotic shrine to all America, loved by every Virginian."

Byrd is succeeded by Dr. John Garland Pollard.

Three Firemen Hurt in Ammonia Blast

New Haven, Jan. 8 (INS)—Three firemen were seriously hurt here today when an ammonia tank in the basement of the Schoenberger market, 360-366 State st., blew up while a squad of firemen were attempting to check a leak.

The victims were William Cleary, Clifford Barrows and James Connors, all of engine 12. All were taken to New Haven hospital where Cleary's condition was put down as dangerous. Asst. Chief Richard F. Greene was slightly overcome.

HEAVIER GUARD ORDERED ON BLACK DUCK

Providence, Jan. 8—Informed of a plot to blow up the rum-smuggling boat Black Duck, on which three men were shot to death by coast guardsmen, federal officials today asked Cranston police to reinforce customs agents guarding the boat at Pawtucket cove. The request was complied with.

Thousands of persons have visited the craft since it was moored in a slip near Cranston after its cargo of nearly 400 cases of liquor was put in storage here.

The Coast Guard rum chaser 290, whose crew fired on the Black Duck with machin uxgunlieshee Duck with machin guns while she was trying to run the blockade into Newport, was on the job again today in Long Island Sound, manned by the same crew. Boatswain A. C. Cornell was in command.

U. S. Atty. Harry M. Boss, Jr., today declined to say whether he would summon the crew of the 290 to appear before a State grand jury which begins sitting next Monday.

The general court martial, trying 29 coast guard sailors involved in stealing and drinking liquor from the seized rum-ship Flor del Mar planned to resume its sittings this afternoon at New London, Ct. Commander M. J. Ryan, president of the court said that several of the trial papers had been received by Prosecutor J. S. Rosenthal and that as soon as he examines them the court will resume.

Comdr. Ryan said he believed the 29 cases would be disposed of quickly.

As a result of the killing of three men on the Black Duck, with all the attendant publicity, the "mother ships that formed Rum Row have disappeared. The stiffening of the coast guard patrol has had its effect, too.

Lowell's One Big Game a Year Plan Meets Opposition

Air Romance, Better Than "Chickie"

CHAPTER 35

GUY stood in the cave above the dark, abrupt step down which Slim had fallen. He flashed his light along this lower level. It showed clear for 50 feet—a blind, shallow pit.

But desperate, seeing a last hope, he got down and explored it. He felt the walls as though they were demonias and purposely concealing the opening through which Pat and Billy had vanished. The lower level had no exit.

He went back and pounded the walls. He shouted: "Pat, Billy! It's Guy. Answer. Pat—Oh God, can't you hear?"

Three hours he'd searched the cave. He hadn't found them. He'd gone down every gallery—crawled along blind tunnels. He'd shouted. Not knowing it, he'd sobbed aloud. And all along he'd left rocks and scraps of the parachute Sheik had cut to pieces. These marked his route.

He said to himself in a still terror: "I haven't missed a turn. It's not such a huge cave." Then he wiped his forehead; it was immediately moist again. The cave might not be huge, it was ghastly. It went in bewildering parallels, in dizzying circles. Twice he had almost lost his way.

And now he seemed to have penetrated all of its dark, echoing aisles. Now he was back at the entrance. He had not found her.

He stood for a moment, beating the walls and shouting. His hoarse, imploring cries came back in a dismal, hollow sob.

But she was here, she must be here! Each lost moment creeping upon her with added menace. Each lost moment bringing near an hour when he would be too late. He grew gray with this fear, with a clammy, half-fainting alarm.

For the third time he went up to the man he had tied to the one lone tree on the canyon floor. He shook him. He stooped down and in a frenzy demanded: "Have you lied?"

In the flashlight Sheik saw murder and anguish in the dark, thin face above his own.

"If she went into that cave, she'd be there! There's one exit. ANSWER ME—what have you done with them?"

He saw Sheik's mouth working; saw the lips framing words. When no sound came, he turned wild. He shouted: "Did she go in the cave? Did you kill them? Did she jump in the parachute, or did you hurl them over the cliff? Good God—SPEAK!"

"She went in the cave."

"Did she come out again? Why isn't she there? Where could she go that I've not gone?"

Sheik's arms were bound to his sides. His fingers touched the ground. And these now scraped up pebbles. He said in husky gasps: "Did you see that black pit? Not the step where Slim fell—a black bottomless pit?"

"At the end of a long gallery?"

"Yes—at the end of it. Maybe they fell down that."

Guy let the lamp form sink to the ground. He steadied himself. His whole body flung against the tree trunk. No! Pat hadn't stumbled in the cave. She'd not plunged into that blinding abyss.

Seek Replacements for Sea Libraries

The Boston Branch of the American Merchant Marine Library Association is again seeking additions and replenishments for the libraries which are placed on merchant ships, lightships, in lighthouses and at coast guard stations.

These libraries, of 75 to 80 books each, are sent all over the world. A library placed on a ship at Boston may be exchanged for another library on a ship tied up at a pier in Shanghai, and later be exchanged again in midatlantic for a ship bound for South Africa. Every one of these books has been read and reread by three various crews. Naturally they wear out.

Foils Husband's Plan to Marry Another

On seeing the marriage intention notices in the press that her husband was about to be married to a Dorchester girl, Mrs. Arthur F DeArmon of Somerville notified the police and they brought about the husband's arrest at the home of his prospective second wife, on a charge of neglect to support his wife and minor child.

DeArmon was found guilty of this charge by Judge M. E. Sturtevant in Somerville District Court and he was sentenced to serve six months in the House of Correction.

IMMUNITY OF REDMOND ADMITTED

Former Hub Promoter Cannot Be Tried Here on Larceny Charge

George F. Redmond, former Boston get-rich-quick huckleshop promoter, who was paroled from Atlanta on December 20 last, cannot be tried in Boston for larceny.

Dist. Atty. William J. Foley was informed that as long as Redmond remains in New York State he is safe from local civil authorities, and also from federal officials.

In other words, through the wording of his parole and the fact that his local bonds were returned at the time Redmond was discharged into the hands of federal officials in Boston he has obtained sanctuary in New York.

Atty. Eugene L. Parodi of New York visited Dist. Atty. Foley and produced a copy of Redmond's federal parole. The local district attorney had previously asked Judge Williams in Superior court for a fugitive warrant for Redmond.

Redmond's probation extends to December 22, 1935, during which period if he remains in New York and violates no laws he will be immune from prosecution.

The trustees of St. Mark's school, Southboro, today announced that Francis Parkman, assistant dean of Harvard University, has accepted an appointment as headmaster of the school. He succeeds Dr. William G. Thayer, resigned, and will assume his new duties Sept. 1.

Mr. Parkman was graduated from Harvard in 1926 with high honors, being awarded his degree after three years' study. He was a member of the Harvard varsity crew that defeated Yale during his last year at the university. Later he enlisted in the U. S. Marine Corps and was commissioned a second lieutenant.

Conry to Cut Expense of Traffic Board

As soon as the appointment of former Congressman Joseph A. Conry as traffic commissioner is confirmed by the civil service commission, he will be instructed by Mayor Curley to thoroughly reorganize the department, weed out the deadwood and pare costs to a minimum.

In the appointment of Conry and the ousting of William A. Fisher from the commission, City Hall circles see the hand of Chairman Frank A. Goodwin of the Finance Commission, who is believed to have recommended the action, and who was said to be ready to challenge the departmental payrolls.

Municipal circles have become uneasy, as a result of this action as further drastic measures along similar lines are feared because of a quiet survey by Chairman Goodwin the results of which have been passed on to Mayor Curley.

"I feel that Conry will take hold of this department," said the mayor, "and reorganize it without necessity of action by me. The amount of money which the commission has expended since last May is astounding.

"I really see no particular need of such a commission. The street commission handled the work fully as satisfactorily, before the separation was ordered."

That the finance commission has been scrutinizing the records of the traffic commission, preparatory to vigorous arraignment of its management, became known shortly before announcement of Conry's appointment.

Incomplete records show that the commission has found it necessary to employ 10 stenographers, some of them in order that they might not be deprived of their civil service rating and that they were paid from $1600 to $2100 per year.

Another appointment, which had been predicted, was that of Capt. John J. Lydon of South Boston as soldiers' relief commissioner in place of John W. Reth who is a past commander of the state department of the American Legion. The salary is $6000.

It is believed that Fire Commissioner Eugene Hultman has also resigned but the failure of the mayor to name former Senator Edward F. McLaughlin as his successor has given some hope to the supporters of the commissioner that he may be continued.

Chairman Goodwin refused to discuss the traffic commission situation. When told of the City Hall understanding that the finance commission had been scrutinizing the records of the traffic commission, he said, "Well, let it stand at that for the present."

Mayor Curley made known that he had suggested to the board of schoolhouse commissioners that they adopt a construction program for the next two or three years entailing expenditures of $15,000,000 in preference to a 10 or 15-year building program.

CURLEY FAVORS NEW LIBRARY

Mayor James M Curley today sent a letter to Gordon Abbott, president of the trustees of Boston public library following a conference with Supt of Schools Jeremiah Burke, with reference to the installation of a trade reference library at the continuation school in Common st., South End.

The mayor wrote to Mr. Abbott, "I am informed that the Boston continuation school, recently erected on Common st., contains quarters that were designed by the school house commission to serve as a library.

"The opportunity for creating a trade school library similar to the one now in use in Detroit, where reference books relative to progress in various trades and mechanical industries might be so available to the pupils of this school and to the public as well, in view of the fact that the school is located in the business center of Boston, should serve a most valued purpose and, provided the suggestion appeals to your board I will greatly appreciate an early conference between the library trustees the school commission the superintendent of schools and the newly created school house commission with a view to some definite program for the rendering of a useful service."

FUNDS FROM FOOTBALL NEEDED

Boston College Director Is at Odds With the Harvard Head, as Is Yale Dean

Both athletic and scholastic opinions of President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, expressed in his recent annual report, were disagreed with today.

His one-big-football-game-a-season plan was characterised as "impractical" by the Rev. Fr. Roddy, faculty director at Boston College.

And President Lowell's suggestions that the master of arts degree be abandoned, were declared "inexpedient" by Dean Clarence W. Mendell of Yale.

A third well-known figure—this one in the football division—declined to comment. He is Clea A. O'Donnell, football coach at Holy Cross.

President Daniel L. Marsh of Boston University upheld President Lowell, however, but in his statement he condemned football generally, repeating his assertions when inaugurated four years ago.

MONEY IS NEEDED.

Fr. Roddy asserted that President Lowell's football idea was worthy in some respects, but could not be considered as a workable plan.

"President Lowell's purpose—no doubt, is good," he said, "and the stimulating of intramural sports is a thing desirable in all colleges. But to arrive at or even approach this idea, large financial resources are necessary and up to the present no better means of raising funds presents itself to the average college than the so-called spectacular football contest."

Dean Mendell, on the academic end, pointed out that the master of arts degree at Yale required hard work for the graduate school and its value is commensurate with the difficulties encountered in getting it.

The dean said, however, that with low standards of scholarship a course to obtain the master's degree would be useless, but with standards as now set at Yale, it is both expedient and necessary.

"In possession means that considerable work of a high caliber has been done. Nevertheless, it might be advisable to make the degree an end in itself rather than a halfway mark to the degree of doctor of philosophy."

ENTRANCE AGE LOWER

Regarding lowering the age of students at entrance, Dean Mendell said that the average has been in the downgrade since the war. "Many of our men," he said, "are made up of those who come to college to study and the other of those who, for family reasons or because they have nothing else to do, drift into college to take up their time."

The latter class, he declared, is large numerically and those in it often are mentally immature and unable to keep up with older men.

President Marsh said

"It is wholesome to have the great president of a great university talk about collegiate athletics as President Lowell of Harvard talks. . . find my own mind in full accord with his indorsement of the Greek attitude toward athletics as over against the Roman attitude.

HIS ATHLETIC CREED.

"My own athletic creed was stated in my inaugural address four years ago, in which I condemned the idolization of men who may be inferior in every respect but in brute force; the ambition to secure victory at any cost; high-salaried, super-organized, unreasonably-specialized coaching systems; a reckless waste of money for football while the academic system starves; over participation in sports by the few and total neglect of them by the many; unwholesome newspaper publicity featuring individual players; a conniving at and unethical professionalism in college athletics, and a confusion in the minds of youth as to why they go to college at all.

"In that same address I declared that I would have athletics not for the sake of any championship, or gate receipts, or drunken and gambling orgies; but, fixing responsibility in this matter where it belongs—definitely with the university authorities—I would have athletics of the students, by the students, for the students—athletics that would at once stimulate loyalty and enthusiasm for the university through contests, and at the same time would develop muscular strength, endurance, energy, willpower, courage and self-control, not in a few students only, but in all of them."

30 MORE OUT OF WORK AS CHELSEA MAYOR HALTS WATER MAIN JOB

CASH NEARLY GONE, WORK HALF DONE

175 Storm City Hall, Trying to Get Positions of the Employes Fired

Halting work on the Eastern ave water main job, Mayor John J Whalen today threw some 30 more city employes out of work, at least temporarily.

Of the $100,000 appropriated for the job, only a little more than $5000 remains, the mayor declared, and "not a single pipe has yet been laid."

He declared the job only "half done" so far and ordered an investigation.

About 175 jobseekers jammed the City Hall this morning in the hope of replacing the 48 employes discharged yesterday. If City Hall vacancies already had been filled, however, and the 35 places in the street department are not to be filled until the necessity arises.

Dispensing with the services of the street department employes was only the regular "January layoff," Mayor Whalen declared, and there should be a heavy snow they will all get their jobs back.

Ten more city heads are scheduled to fall today and there is a shakeup coming in the fire department, Mayor Whalen indicated as he named Joseph A. Tyrrell acting water commissioner. Tyrrell replaces George Cassell, who is ill, and his selection was a surprise to the mayor's closest friends.

Cassell remains the commissioner, the mayor explained, still drawing salary, but Tyrrell will direct the department during his absence and will be compensated.

At the same time, Mayor Whalen announced the choice of former Representative John S. Donovan as private secretary. He gave no indication of the fate of James A O'Brien who still retains his post as city engineer and street superintendent.

The police department shakeup previously announced became effective today and the new mayor is expected to start on the fire department tomorrow.

Mrs. Ella van Patten, matron, and Jerome McCarthy, sweeper were the first of the City Hall employes to be swept out by the new broom. The mayor then announced the following discharges and replacements

William Flynn, assistant gardener, replaced by Warren Malone; Joseph Shuckrow, janitor, replaced and George Blake, carpenters replaced by Ernest McNeil, Fred Mosier and Charles Smergalia; Joseph Orlando, mason's helper, replaced by Andrew Darcy; Peter Moore, plumber, replaced by Leo Caffaki; William Spracklin, plumber's helper, replaced by Ernest Mason; Fred Cassidy, steamfitter, replaced by Daniel Carey; Joseph Carlon, a helper, replaced by Earl McNeil; Walter LeBlanc and James McNulty, painters, replaced by Thomas McGovern and Harold Elder.

Miss Margaret Cronin was appointed stenographer to the mayor

BACK BAY FIRE DAMAGES SHOP

Valuable furnishings and decorations were either destroyed or damaged today when flames swept the E. C. Howe Antique Shop, 73 Newbury st., Back Bay

Fire officials placed the loss at $6,000, but the proprietor of the shop said it would be $10,000

The blaze originated in the basement of the five story brick building and was confined to the basement and first floor. Spontaneous combustion was reported the cause.

On the second and third floors the individual offices of Ralph W Gray, Gorton Allen and Elliot T Putnam, all architects, were slightly damaged by smoke.

Mysterious Woman Held in Hotel Fraud

A woman who identified herself by several names and residences collapsed once in the lobby of a hotel, following arrest, and twice at police headquarters while being booked for defrauding the hotel of $68.

She first said she was the wife of a Washington employe in the department of justice. Later she said she came from Virginia and still later remembered her home was in Brooklyn. So police could establish her identity, Judge Parmenter, in Municipal Court today, continued the case until Jan. 15, holding her in $500.

Churches Benefit From Woman's Will

Sums of $300 were bequeathed several ecclesiastical organizations by Ernest J. Hoyt in her will filed today at Dedham

The Harvard Church at Brookline received $500, and like amounts go to the Woman's Guild, Brookline, the Congregational Church at Revere and the Congregational Church at Marion.

Making his debut as a reporter, Sidney Szathmary, office boy of the Boston Evening American, had an interview with Mayor James M. Curley as his first assignment. Sidney is shown here as he plied "Hizzoner" with pertinent questions. (Staff photo.)

Boy Reporter Finds Mayor a 'Great Guy'

By SIDNEY SZATHMARY
Office Boy, Boston Evening American

Mayor Curley is a great guy! I interviewed him today, and I know.

My city editor sent me to talk with him, and it was the first time I ever interviewed anybody in my life.

I was scared stiff.

But Mayor Curley made me feel at home right off. He couldn't have done more for me if I'd been his own son.

It was the mayor's second day in office, and loads of people were waiting to see him. When they opened the door to let me in, I was shaking like a leaf.

A feller put two chairs close together for us. Me and the mayor sat down, and we shook hands.

"Hello, son," he said.

While our cameraman was taking our picture, the mayor told me to look at him.

"Look at my tie," he urged "It's only a 50 cent tie, but look at it anyway."

The mayor began our interview by telling me how much he was interested in school boys and girls of Boston.

TIPS ON SUCCESS

"What's the best way for a boy or girl to succeed in life?" was my first question.

"Obey your parents," replied the mayor, take advantage of every opportunity and study and work hard. Above all, be sure to lead a clean life."

I began to shoot questions

My next question was "What will you do to help the school boys and girls?"

His reply was very specific

"I propose to co-operate with the newly created supervisor of schoolhouse construction, in order that every pupil may have a permanent seat in a permanent school building."

SPECIAL PLAY STREETS

Question number three was: "What will you do for boys and girls in parks and playgrounds?"

This time his reply was a little longer, but it interested me. He said that under the proposed $10,000,000 street surfacing program which he is urging, a novel plan was outlined

"It is the purpose to have one in every five streets set aside in the residential sections as play streets," he said

This setting aside of some streets for a part of the day would give children a chance to play, free from dangers of traffic.

"It is further the purpose to make playgrounds more attractive and provide added facilities," he added

I asked the mayor what he would do about the Strandway and Columbus Park in South Boston, which he started when in office the last time

"I'm glad you asked that," he said, explaining that many people wanted to know.

He said that it was his purpose to request an appropriation of $750,000 to complete the park."

This money, he explained, would be enough to provide additional facilities for bathing and recreation, and give a 10,000 seat stadium.

LAUDS CAMP LIFE

"What do you think of the Citizens' Military Training Camp idea," was my next question.

"I am heartily in favor," he said. He added the comment that the movement not only was valuable for national defense, but also "as a means of promoting principles of hygiene and respect for lawfully constituted authority."

My last question was one that I know every friend of the mayor will join me in asking.

"How's Mrs. Curley today," I wanted to know

"Mrs. Curley for a period of 18 months has made the bravest fight that a human being ever made," was his reply, "and I am not only hopeful, but certain, that she will ultimately be restored to complete health."

Civil Service Gives Out 2 Eligible Lists

The state civil service commission today established eligible lists for boiler inspector in the state department of public safety and junior chemist in the state department of public health. There are two vacancies in the latter grade

Those eligible for boiler inspector are Elmer O. Peterson, Quincy; George W. Leadbetter, West Somerville; Edward J. Kelly, Arlington

For junior chemist on water, Carleton P. Piper, Randolph, and Nathan White of Malden are eligible

Those qualified for the second junior chemist's position, food and drug division, are Philleas A. Rideout, Boston, Harry T. Finn, Brighton.

Attorney Is Given Jail Term in Theft

A year in jail for larceny of $375 was the sentence given today to Edwin M. Wolley, Boston attorney, in East Cambridge court. Wolley lives in Hazelhurst ave., West Newton. He was found guilty several weeks ago of appropriating money he had been engaged to collect for Paul Goguen, Orchid st., Cambridge

The case had been continued from time to time to give the attorney opportunity to make restitution, but he had failed to do so. He appealed

PARKMAN HITS AT STATE RULE OF BOSTON

Senator Deplores the Lack of System in Control and Inconsistencies

Numerous examples seem to demonstrate that there is no guiding principle which directs the state "in assuming control over city affairs, Sen. Henry Parkman, Jr., declared today at the Twentieth Century Club.

Senator Parkman spoke on: "What Would Home Rule Mean to Boston," at the conference on Municipal Issues, which continues tomorrow.

Granting that the state has, and rightly, jurisdiction over cities, the speaker asserted that a larger measure of home rule is certainly desirable from the standpoint of Boston.

State control of city affairs, he said, has been an evolution, a development by expediency rather than a systematic plan.

"For example, the governor appoints the police commissioner and the licensing board. Why these and not the fire commissioner or the health commissioner?"

STATE INCONSISTENT.

He pointed out that none of these functions is of more state-wide concern than any other. Further the licensing board has authority only over certain licenses and not over scores of others issued by city officials.

"Again the state fire marshal retains control over certain matters and not over others, all of them matters of fire prevention of apparently equal importance. This particular division of authority has been severely criticized by the mayor's committee on fire insurance rates and undoubtedly has been considered by the recess commission on fire prevention laws."

The Senator referred to the Boston charter and its many changes, on most of these occasions the change being effected by the Legislature without submission to the voters.

TAX LIMIT IS "JOKE"

While Boston has practically nothing to say about the fundamental form of its government, other cities in the state have a fairly wide range of choice, Sen. Parkman said.

The Legislature frequently delays in granting Boston permission to borrow money or raise it by taxation, he pointed out, adding that the fixing of the tax limit was more or less of a joke

Referring to the state's custom of making special privileges pay for themselves, Senator Parkman said Boston could be trusted to set a proper value on its special privileges as was shown last year when it set the sum of $2500 for the pair out for Sunday baseball.

Charge Man Forced to Sell Business

A novel way of acquiring a business and a working capital, is alleged by the authorities in the case of Chieftain M. Vidito of Lowell, indicted by the Middlesex County Grand Jury on charges of carrying a pistol and of armed robbery of Edward C. Denault, also of Lowell

According to the authorities, Vidito was negotiating with Denault for the purchase of the latter's oil burner business, and the negotiations culminated at Chelmsford on Dec. 27 with Vidito forcing Denault, at pistol point, to give him a check for $2000 and a bill of sale of the business. Denault, at a safer moment, stopped payment of the check, according to the authorities.

Edison to Get More New England Power

Further interchange of electricity between the steam power plants of the Boston Edison Company and the waterpower plants of the New England Power Company will be effected upon completion of two transmission lines now being laid between Tewksbury and Woburn.

The high-voltage lines are being laid 13 miles on steel towers between the New England Power Company's Tewksbury sub-station and the Edison sub-station being constructed in Woburn. The circuit will be equipped with recently perfected breakers providing protection against lightning and adverse weather conditions and will be completed in the spring

FIGHTS BILL FOR SUNDAY HOCKEY

Rev. Donald McLeod Calls It Slap at the Pilgrims in Tercentenary Year

The Rev. Donald McLeod of the First United Presbyterian Church of Boston today threatened to take no further part in the tercentennary exercises scheduled for this year if the Legislature makes further inroads into the sanctity of the Sabbath.

He spoke before the legislative committee on legal affairs in opposition to a bill widening the scope of the Sunday sports law to include indoor hockey and indoor basketball, sponsored by Representative James E. Hagan of Somerville.

"SLAP AT PILGRIMS"

"There is a fearful tendency throughout the State and the nation to do away with the Christian Sabbath," the clergyman said.

He warned his hearers that they are meddling with a divine law and prophesied that no individuals, state or nation "can play loose" with the Lord's Day and get across with it

"It is a slap in the face to every Pilgrim that trod the ground of Beacon Hill," he contended.

When the Sunday sports law was on the ballot he reminded the committee the argument used was that it would bring many working people out into the open. Now they are talking about indoor sports, he pointed out.

CALLS IT "MATERIALISM"

"This is a direct violation of God's most holy law," he concluded "It is the most contemptible kind of materialism."

Former Mayor John M. Webster of Somerville, the Rev. John Gregg of Boston, John Calder Gordon of Somerville, and Dr. Robert Watson of the Lord's Day League, were other speakers against the bill

Rep. Hagan was the only speaker in favor. He argued that hockey and basketball, as clean sports, might well be included in the list of entertainments allowed on Sunday.

Medical Center's Heads Lay Plans

Re-establishment of the "country doctor" in rural communities will be one of the chief aims of the New England Medical Center, whose executive committee met today at a luncheon given at the Chamber of Commerce for discussion of raising $1,500,000.

Dr. Roger I. Lee, 264 Beacon st., presided. Arthur D. Rotch was principal speaker. The $1,500,000 sought will be largely devoted to new buildings and equipment for centralizing the Boston Dispensary, the Floating Hospital for Children and Tufts Medical School. A new hospital to take the place of the Floating Hospital will also be provided. The campaign will open January 23.

15 Ships Arrive in Hub After Storms

The steamship Boston City with a load of china clay from Fowey, Eng., and the Leyland liner Ninian from Manchester and Liverpool arrived in Boston two days late today. The West Eldrara with freight from Antwerp via New York arrived nearly a week behind schedule.

Fifteen vessels were checked in before noon. Most of the arrivals from overseas reported stormy passages until two days ago.

TWO DRUG RING SUSPECTS HELD IN $20,000

U. S. Agents Say One of the Accused Men Is in the International Traffic

Nathan Stein, 42, of St. John, N. B., said by federal officials to be suspected of connection with an international drug ring, was under arrest here today in one of the most important moves yet made against the drug traffic.

Stein, who the federal agents said they believed could have delivered drugs worth $1,000,000, was captured with Leroy D. Parchall, 38, of Piedmont al., Worcester.

The arrests were made by Dr. H. H. Wouters, chief of the federal narcotic squad in New England, together with members of the Boston narcotic squad.

The two men were taken into custody after federal officials said they had sold several hundred dollars' worth of drugs to them. Marked money and a quantity of morphine were found in their possession, agents said, the drug being valued at $2000

Stein and Paschall were taken to police headquarters and in default of $10,000 bail each were held all night. They were to be arraigned today before U. S. Commissioner Jenney on charges of sale and possession of drugs and possible conspiracy to violate the Harrison act.

Stein has been living in a Boston hotel for about a month, the authorities said

Stein and Paschall were arraigned before Commissioner Jenney on charges of sale and possession of drugs. They pleaded not guilty and Stein was held in $5000 while bonds of $2000 were required in the case of Paschall. Their cases were continued.

WINTHROP, REVERE AND SAUGUS PROTEST NARROW GAUGE FARES

LYNN RATES STILL THE LOWEST

Other Ways of Getting to Boston Shown to Be More Expensive

A storm of protest has arisen over the proposed increase in fares on the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad.

Hundreds of persons who travel daily between Boston and Lynn and Winthrop and Lynn have expressed their intention of attending the public hearing before the State Department of Public Utilities which has been requested. At this hearing their protest will be registered.

Among those who are protesting is Selectman John P. Clancy of Winthrop, who says he will call a public meeting at which the residents of his town will be given an opportunity to air their views.

Others who have protested include Representative Nelson Pratt of Saugus, whose constituents will be effected by the increase, and Senator Condo J Brodbine of Revere. They filed petitions for a public hearing within an hour after officials of the railroad asked the Public Utilities Commission for permission to put the proposed increases into effect next month.

MUST STUDY PROBLEM

Mayor J. F. Manning of Lynn today notified City Solicitor P. H. Shannahan that he desires a conference with him to discuss the proposed new rates. "I haven't had time to form an opinion on the matter yet," said Mayor Manning to a Boston Evening American reporter. "It will require a good deal of study and the arguments of commuters and officials of the road will have to be considered before reaching a conclusion."

Secretary Frank Seavey of Lynn Chamber of Commerce said two meetings have been called for tomorrow and Friday to discuss the proposed new rates. "The executive committee of the Chamber of Commerce will meet tomorrow, and will consider the subject, and on Friday the retail bureau will consider the matter. Plans will be made to obtain data as to the revenue and expenses of the road. If a case is shown and the fare increases are warranted the business men of Lynn would not oppose the new schedule.

STILL LOWEST FARE.

"After all, the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad is the only road operating between Lynn and Boston that has not increased fares since the World War. The fare on this road, between Lynn and Boston, was 10 cents in 1904. It is still 10 cents, although many improvements have been made of late.

"The Boston & Maine railroad charges 12 cents for a single ride between Lynn and Boston or 10 cents on a 12-ride ticket. The Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co. charges 20 cents for a trolley ride from Lynn to Boston.

"Under the proposed increases of the 'Narrow Gauge' a ride between Lynn and Boston will be 12½ cents on 12-ride tickets. That means that this road would still carry a passenger from Lynn to Boston 6½ cents cheaper than any competitor."

PREMATURE, SAYS PRATT

Although the proposed schedule would not affect the rate between Boston and stations in Revere and Winthrop, those persons who use the line to Lynn from any other point will have to pay an increase. In most instances, of from 10 to 15 cents.

Pratt told the commission: "In view of the fact that your commission authorized the railroad to float bonds to the amount of $1,-000,000 for the electrification of this road and subsequently authorized a $500,000-bond issue to be floated, this schedule for a rate increase seems a little premature.

He pointed out that during the period from Jan. 1 to Sept. 1 last year, a total of 10,029,131 passengers were carried, an approximate increase of 500,000 over the previous year.

Gardner F. Wells, president of the road, said:

"It is planned that during the next five years extensive improvements amounting to over $600,000 will be made. A large portion of this will be for much needed track improvements and for improvements to stations, ferries, docks and cars, all of these improvements being essential to the maintenance of the present excellent electric service."

Harvard Seeks Comet

Harvard astronomers are focussing the big telescope at the observatory in Concord ave., Cambridge, in hope of definitely allocating the Wilk comet, celestial wanderer from the depths of space which is approaching the sun at a speed of upward of 1,000,000 miles a day. The comet was first observed by an astronomer named Wilk at the University of Cracow, Czechoslovakia, and the photograph which he took has been enlarged three times at the Yerkes Observatory, Williams Bay, Wis. The tail of the comet, which is rapidly lengthening as that errant body is approaching the sun, was at the time of first observation some 2,000,000 miles in length.

Scott and Douglas at Symphony Cafe

Theatrical guest night will be observed this evening under the direction of Gordon Graham, master of ceremonies, and broadcasting artist whom no doubt you have heard on the Boston Elevated program as well as the Fox Fur Hour.

Graham has a very pleasing voice and this is his second season with the Symphony Restaurant.

Narrow Gauge R.R. Proposed Fares

Boston to West Lynn or Lynn, 13 cents.

Boston to Winthrop, 10 cents.

Boston to Point of Pines, 10 cents.

Lynn to West Lynn, 5 cents.

Lynn or West Lynn to Beachmont or points between, 10 cents.

Lynn or West Lynn to Winthrop, 15 cents.

Lynn or West Lynn to Orient Heights, Harbor View, Wood Island, East Boston or Boston, 18 cents.

Rides between any two stations in Revere or any two stations in Winthrop, 5 cents.

Rides on ferry, Boston to East Boston or return, 3 cents; 10 for 25 cents.

Noonday Luncheon and Dance at Stella

Then there is the dinner dancing with a great floor show that may be enjoyed between 5 30 and 9 o'clock for a nominal charge.

Billy Payne, master of ceremonies, enhances that program by his splendid rendition of song hits, in which he is ably assisted by Carl Moore.

ATTORNEYS IN CLASH AT GAS RATE HEARING

A discussion between attorneys representing Boston, consumers, the Boston Consolidated Gas Co and members of the Public Utilities Commission today enlivened a continued hearing on petitions for a rate reduction by the gas company

The discussion had to do with the right of the commission to require production of information showing what it costs the New England Fuel and Transportation Co to produce the gas which it sells to the Boston Consolidated Gas Co.

Atty. Marshall for consumers intimated that the subsidiaries of the gas company are "endeavoring to conceal something."

Chairman Attwill of the commission said that construction of the present statutes on the subject is involved and that the commission believes its powers are limited in requiring information relative to dealings, relations and contracts between companies.

Attwill contended that the commission has not the power to make the two companies party respondents in the present rate case.

Commissioner Goldberg interposed to say that in his opinion the statutory powers are not broad enough and ought to be amended to allow the commission to go further into relations between private companies and public utilities.

The meeting will be in conjunction with the pageant and parade as the start of a nation-wide drive against Volstradism, headed by Gen Clarence R. Edwards, A Fitz-Roy Anderson and other prominent citizens.

Nationally known speakers are invited to attend the meeting which will also be a memorial for liberties and rights lost under prohibition, according to the anti-Vostead workers.

Woman Leader Backs $5 Marriage Fee

If you cant raise five dollars for a marriage fee, you'd better not marry

This is the advice to young people by Mrs. Grace Coleman Lathrop of Boston, business woman and civic leader, in commenting upon the legislative proposal to assess fees from $1.02 to $5.

Mrs. Lathrop takes a directly opposite view to that of Rev. William L. Stidger of the Copley Methodist

Memorial Tablet to Gen Wood Is Urged

A tablet in the State House as a memorial to the late Maj-Gen Leonard Wood was urged at a legislative hearing today at the State House by M. A. O'Brien of Dorchester

He also spoke in favor of his bill calling for the reconstruction and enlargement of the State House and the erection of buildings for a State library, a military museum and an executive mansion, expressing the hope that the Legislature would see its way to make a start this year

Church, who feels that $5 is too high an amount.

"It will hinder marriages," he said

Miss Lathrop feels that it "is altogether too easy to get married nowadays." She says that if a man can't afford to spend $5 for the fee, it is an indication that he hasn't enough earning power to support a family.

Rev Stidger, who is a professor in Boston University School of Theology vigorously opposes any increase.

"Such an effort to raise the fee is perfectly ridiculous," he said. "I never heard of it being done anywhere else

"I am absolutely against any such method of seeking further public income, for help but not Prohibition is what is needed."

The laws of Massachusetts provide for a license fee charge of $1. The 2 cents generally imposed is for the postage put on the stamped, return envelope given to the aspiring couple. Their clergyman must mail back the certification of their marriage

If Boston, for instance, should provide stamped envelopes free of charge, the city would have an expensive bill. In the Hub there are about 10,000 such applications annually.

How we came to make the perfected loaf

Every forward-looking baker of bread has hoped that some day he could bake the perfect loaf—the bread that in every feature—crust, slicing, texture, taste, toasting-quality—would be as near to perfection as possible.

We made up our minds that we would do this very thing. So we took a new look at what people really want in bread.

After a long period of concentrated effort by our master bakers, sparing neither cost nor any other consideration in testing our ingredients and our baking methods, we have succeeded magnificently. We have produced—and at the accepted price for quality bread—a full-weight loaf, perfected in every detail, and of surpassing goodness. The proof of our success you will find in the bread itself—Mother Hubbard, the perfected loaf.

We will not tell you now about each feature of the perfection of Mother Hubbard Bread. We will tell you later how Mother Hubbard, in every single point that you consider important in the bread you give your family, has been brought to so high a degree of perfection that it may justly be called the perfected loaf.

In the meantime you can see for yourself just how fine a loaf Mother Hubbard is. Your grocer has the perfected loaf and will be glad to recommend it to you.

Break Between Calder and Club Owners Widening

BRUINS HAVE BEEN GIVEN POOR DEAL

By BILL GRIMES

DUE to some rulings made by President Frank Calder of the National Hockey League against Boston, New York and Chicago, there is an open break between the chief executive and the owners of these clubs.

For years, the minor leagues have been protesting against Calder as the supreme ruler of hockey. They have deemed it unfair that the president of the N. H. L. should be invested with the authority to decide questions involving his own organization and all leagues affiliated with that body.

Bill Grimes

Because of these protests Calder resigned the presidency, but when the board of governors, how considered it best was given back the reins of office.

The protests from the minor leagues, the old board of governors was content to allow Calder to grind the minor league owners into the ground.

They were lacking in foresight to see that hockey of the future must depend upon the minors which are the developing fields for the major league.

MINOR LEAGUE IGNORED

Although the minor leagues have never been able to get to "first base" with their Calder protests, unless the latest tactics which were announced the head of the N. H. L. is ironed out to the satisfaction of the big league owners, and it is difficult to perceive how such a condition is to be brought about, the minor league promoters will not get a break in the future.

The protest from Major McLaughlin of the Chicago Black Hawks which was not given enough consideration by President Calder, was ratified by the board of governors. But the owner of the Hawks is still bitter over the lack of courtesy shown him by Calder.

Col. J. S. Hammond of the Rangers is entangled in a tournament with Pres. Calder over the "Batt" Phillips case. Other than fining the Montreal Maroons for the underhanded manner in which they worked with the Windsor club of the Canadian Professional League in acquiring Phillips, there is nothing that Calder can do in this case.

The New Yorker released Phillips from his negotiation list and before he had shown proof of his purchase overture with Phillips the Maroons, with the Windsor club acting as their agent, purchased this player from Frank Patrick for $10,000.

When Pres. Calder renders his decision, Col. Hammond principally to cover up his own error, will be equally as bitter as that of Laughlin of Chicago. From now on New York and Chicago will be anti-Calder, and will readily join with Boston interests to checkmate the N. H. L. president.

HUB AGAINST CALDER

For years, the Boston interests have been carrying on a lone fight against Calder's decisions. The Bruins have been on the losing end of four important cases.

The Boston Hockey Club bought and paid the National Hockey League for its franchise in good faith and in accordance with the league requirements. Yet, C. F. Adams has been subjected to troublesome litigation.

In spite of the fact that the Boston promoters with the sanction of Pres. Calder assumed all of the league's liabilities pertaining to the Boston franchise, the league has overlooked its obligation to protect the purchaser from conflicting claims, not in accord with the statements made by the board of governors at the time the franchise issue.

Pres. Calder and C. F. Adams came to the parting of the ways during the deal for the Western League players.

In order that the New York Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks should enter the National Hockey League, C. F. Adams made arrangements for the purchase of the Western Hockey League from Frank Patrick.

Adams paid Patrick $50,000 for certain players and he also arranged for the underwriting of the $250,000 balance. Aside from the players which were for the Bruins Adams had agreed with New York Chicago and Detroit that certain players were to be allotted to each of these clubs.

MIGHTY MUSCLED SPOHRER WHO BATTLES SHIRES FRIDAY

Sharkey Will Fight Phil Scott at Miami

By JACK CONWAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Jack Sharkey, American heavyweight champion, has signed to battle Phil Scott, British titleholder, in a 15-round bout at Miami, Fla., on February 27, under the direction of Madison Square Garden Corporation.

In the event the Boston heavyweight wins from Scott he has agreed to meet Max Schmeling in New York at a Milk Fund show to be staged by a committee headed by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst.

Johnny Buckley, manager of Sharkey, refused to sign for the Miami contest with Scott until Madison Square Garden Corporation consented to allow Sharkey to box Schmeling at the show to be sponsored by Mrs. Hearst. Representatives of the Milk Fund are of the opinion that a Sharkey-Schmeling contest will draw a million dollar gate.

William F. Carey, president of the Garden, told Buckley that the Garden would be glad to give Mrs. Hearst and other members of the Milk Fund committee their full cooperation

The tussle between Sharkey and Scott was signed after two weeks of effort on the part of William F. Carey of the Garden.

Shortly after Johnny Buckley, notified the Garden a week ago that he was willing to battle Schmeling or Scott in Miami, but that he would not take on Tuffy Griffith or any other inferior opponents

He stood on the platform of William Muldoon, veteran member of the New York boxing commission, who is of the opinion that Sharkey, Scott and Schmeling are the only heavyweights who are entitled to a crack at Gene Tunney's vacated title.

Sharkey made it clear that his only interest in the boxing game is to win the heavyweight championship of the world. He is burning with this ambition and does not feel that he should be asked to take on every mediocre heavyweight who may pop up on the fistic horizon.

MAN FOUGHT THEM ALL

The Boston heavyweight has battled Wills, Godfrey, Dempsey, Stribling, McTigue, Loughran, Heeney, Maloney, Risko and other famous ring men. He has taken on all comers, but now feels he should not be asked to battle the foreign heavyweights who block his advance to the heavyweight throne. Scott, the British champion, won a 10-round decision over Victorio Campolo of the Argentine at Elbette Field, Brooklyn, last summer. He also forced Schmeling to return to Germany rather than to meet him.

More recently Scott won on a foul in the second round of his bout with Otto Von Porat. The latter drove a left hook low.

Scott returned to England after the Von Porat bout to spend the holidays with his family. He will return to this country at once.

Sharkey is at Miami Beach, Fla., with Mrs Sharkey, their three children and members of their family. He went to Miami Beach on a vacation when it looked as though he would not fight in Florida.

Johnny Buckley called Sharkey on the long distance telephone as soon as the Scott match was closed.

"I am already in fair condition," Sharkey told Buckley. "I will not start training until the first part of February. This will give me four week in which to get fit for the match. I feel confident that I shall win from Scott and then go on to conquer Schmeling. If I am successful in defeating Scott and Schmeling, I believe the public will recognize me as the heavyweight champion of the world."

DEMPSEY OR MAX NEXT

Buckley agreed with the Milk Fund committee that in the event it is unable to secure Schmeling for a June bout that he is perfectly willing to tackle Jack Dempsey in the event the old Tiger comes roaring down the comeback trail again.

Sharkey would get greater enjoyment out of tackling Dempsey than in meeting any other heavyweight. He would like to clear up the famous "fair or foul" controversy for all time by scoring a knockout over Dempsey.

The Sharkey-Scott bout will be staged at the new arena which the Garden is building in Miami city. The arena has a seating capacity of 52,000.

The Garden plans to have Campolla, Paulino, Bertazzolo and some of the other foreign heavyweights pitted against the best possible American opposition in the supporting card.

The top price for tickets will be $25 and the low price $5.

Last February Sharkey and Stribling drew a crowd of 40,000. The gate hit $465,000. The limited seating capacity of the arena at Miami Beach made it necessary to turn away 10,000 persons.

With a sellout at the new arena at Miami, the gate will top $500,000. Sharkey and Scott will each receive 25 per cent of the net receipts.

Phil Scott Is to Sail for America Next Wednesday

London, Jan. 8 (AP)—Phil Scott, British heavyweight boxing champion, is booked to sail on the Homeric one week from today for his bout with the American, Jack Sharkey.

It was that the Miami match had been definitely arranged for February 27 was welcomed by the British sporting world. Fight fans are planning to give Scott a hearty sendoff.

Consider Sharkey as the Referee of Friday's Bout

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 8 (AP)—Jack Sharkey, opponent of Phil Scott at Miami February 27, is being considered as a referee for the Mandell-Quintero non-title lightweight bout here Friday night.

Opposing managers continued their conferences today in an attempt to select a third man for the Mandell go at the Miami Beach Kennel Club. They hoped to name one before tomorrow when, according to their contracts, Promoter G. R. K. Carter will pick the arbiter unless the managers agreed on one.

438 Teams Entered in Hearst Rifle Shoot

By MAJOR JESS KRUEGER

CHICAGO, Jan. 8—With 438 teams already entered in the William Randolph Hearst Rifle Trophy Shoot, this year's matches are assured of being the greatest ever held among the R. O. T. C. units in the country's educational institutions.

The time limit for accepting entries is Jan. 15. It is expected that more than 450 teams will have officially notified the Sixth Corps Area of their intention of participating in the matches this year.

The sharpshooters in the Hearst matches represent approximately 127,000 reserve officers now in training in universities, colleges, military academies and high schools in the United States, Porto Rico and Hawaii.

The first match was fired in 1922 with only 28 teams participating and since that time the competition has grown in popularity until now it is recognized as the biggest event of the year by the cadets.

Maj.-Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the Sixth Corps Area in Chicago, has been designated by the War Department to conduct the match. He will order the sending out of targets for the official scores directly after the close of the entry time limit, in order that firing may begin as promptly as possible after February 1.

In addition to the trophies, medals and other prizes regularly awarded to winners, both national and sectional, this year the national champions will receive a trip to Washington, where they will be officially congratulated by the Secretary of War. This trip will be taken during the summer vacation

The present holders of the national championship titles are University of Arkansas, Missouri Military Academy and Western Kentucky State Teachers' College, which shoots with the high schools

The sectional champions are Coe College, University of Washington Lehigh University and University of Arkansas; Missouri Military Academy, San Diego Army and Navy Academy, the Manlius school and Staunton Military Academy, Waukegan Township high, Walla Walla high school, Fox Bedford high school and Western Kentucky States Teachers' College.

Harvard Matmen Meet Tech Tonight

Harvard's mat season opens tonight when the Cantab varsity and freshmen grapplers meet M. I. T. at Hemenway Gym.

Coach Cliff Gallagher, presenting his first Harvard coached team is confident that his matmen will come through with a win in their debut. His team has many veterans in the lineup.

Tech's team is also experienced, and the bouts in the various divisions ought to be hotly disputed.

Large Entry List for Title Bouts

More than 100 entries are anticipated for the annual State amateur boxing championships, which will be decided at the Boston Arena, Monday night, January 20, according to a conservative estimate made by the boxing committee of the New England Association of the A. A. U.

These title events, which will include all the eight championship classes is expected to shatter last year's record, when the tournament proved one of the most successful amateur pure events ever staged in this city.

Million Dollar Show for Mrs. Hearst's Milk Fund

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—"Those folks who say there isn't any gratitude in the fight game are all wrong," said Mr. Boston today. "I was seated in Bill Carey's private office when Johnny Buckley was negotiating a $1,000,000 fight contract with the Madison Square Garden Corporation.

"The Garden wanted Sharkey to box at Miami, Fla., but it was also seeking him as an opponent for Max Schmeling of Germany, whom it has under contract. A Sharkey-Schmeling bout is a $1,000,000 gate attraction and would mean a profit of $400,000 to the Garden.

"'You cannot have the Sharkey-Schmeling bout,' said Buckley.

"'Why?' demanded the incredulous Carey. 'That will be the biggest fight since Dempsey and Tunney battled at Chicago.'

"'Because I agreed with Jack Conway that if Sharkey fought Schmeling the contest would be staged for Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's Milk Fund in June. When most of the writers were declaring Sharkey was a third rater, Conway insisted Sharkey would some day be heavyweight champion of the world. He gave us encouragement when we needed it. He now wants the Sharkey-Schmeling bout for the Milk Fund. The Milk Fund is also one of the finest charities in the world.'

"'Then the Milk Fund gets the $1,000,000 match,' said Carey."

No Definite Crew Plans at Dartmouth

Hanover, N. H., Jan. 8 (INS)—Harry F. Heneage, supervisor of athletics at Dartmouth, today announced that nothing definite has yet been decided about the organization of a crew at Dartmouth.

Heneage further denied that he was on the lookout for a coach for this sport.

This is indirect contradiction to reports which stated that complete arrangements had been made for an Indian crew.

Rowing conditions on the connecticut river are far from ideal, Heneage stated, and the successful operation of a crew on the river would necessitate a dam in order to make the four-mile required course. No such action is contemplated in the immediate future, Heneage added.

RECORD CROWD EXPECTED TO SEE FRIEDMAN AND SCHAAF BOUT FRIDAY

ONE of the most bitter heavyweight feuds that has ever raged among Hub giants will be settled when Ernie Schaaf steps into the ring at the Boston Garden Friday night to clash with Al Friedman of Roslindale.

And at the same time Art "The Great" Shires, the gabby first sacker of the Chicago White Sox, makes his flatic debut here against Al Spohrer, Braves catcher.

These two features are expected to prove the magnet which will shatter all attendance records for the Hub.

Schaaf has the opportunity of stepping into the ring with Young Stribling of Atlanta if he is able to conquer Friedman in the bout. An offer was received from Promoter Carter of Miami for the Hub sailor to meet Stribling in the southern resort. Schaaf is anxious to meet Stribling, as he always has insisted that he can beat him.

Al Lippe, manager of Friedman, sent word to Eddie Mack at the Garden that he is prepared to back Friedman to the extent of $2500 at ringside odds to take the measure of Schaaf in this bout.

No less than three prominent heavyweights are awaiting the result of this match. Jimmy Maloney, Primo Carnera and Armand Emanuel have signified their eagerness to meeting the winner of Friday night's bout.

Without doubt both of these bitter rivals will go out from the opening gong, hopeful of landing a knockout punch.

Since Friedman knocked out "Big Boy" Rawson in his last bout in this city, Hub fans are of the opinion that he can just about knock out any opponent selected for him, and it is a certainty that he will go into the ring as the popular choice of the big crowd.

The Great Shires, baseball's gift to the boxing game, will be unable to arrive in the Hub until Friday morning, but he will be here in plenty of time to take a needed rest and to be at his best form for his test against Al Spohrer.

The meeting between these baseball rivals has stirred the interest of Hub fans and in this bout it is almost a certainty that a knockout will finish it.

Spohrer, who has been training in the Hub for the past week and whose fistic ability has opened the eyes of Hub fans, expects to score a knockout against the Chicago player.

One of the best preliminary cards of the season will support these two features.

REISELT WINS FIFTH MATCH

New York, Jan. 8 (AP)—Otto Reiselt, German billiard-master from Philadelphia, once again is sitting on top of the three-cushion world with a second national title within his grasp.

Five of the world's best angle players already have succumbed to Reiselt's cool, consistent type of play. Today the Philadelphian found Gus Copulos, a battler from Detroit, barring his way to his sixth consecutive victory.

A win would assure Reiselt of at least a tie for the title, with only Champion Johnny Layton in his path to a clear claim. The schedule brings Reiselt and Layton together Friday, in one of the last two blocks.

Layton remained in running in defense of his title by rallying to defeat Copulos 50 to 34 in 49 innings of dreb billiards.

In today's secondary feature Layton plays Hall preceding the Reiselt-Copulo match. Kleckner apparently has another game won as he meets Jordan in the second game of the afternoon, Schuler will attempt to break into the win column standing Denton in the day's opener.

The standing:

Player.	W.	L.
Reiselt	4	0
Layton	4	1
Hall	3	1
Kleckner	2	2
Copulos	1	3
Denton	1	3
Jordan	1	3
Schuler	0	3

BRAVES FARM OUT 4 ROOKIES

The Braves management today announced the release, under option, of Pitchers George Perry, Clayton Touchstone and Bill Clarkson and Catcher Lou Leggett. All go to the Newark club of the International League with the exception of Clarkson, who will toil for the Dallas club of the Texas League in the future.

In making the announcement of the release, Judge Fuchs, president of the club, added that hereafter the Tribe will farm out young players not yet ready for the big show instead of trying to develop them on major league benches.

"I have reached the conclusion," said the judge, "that the Braves have made a mistake in keeping young players not quite ready for big leagues on the team instead of farming them out to some fast minor league club which would offer them the opportunity of playing daily.

"Other big league clubs have become successful by placing prospects in the minors until ready and that is what the Braves will do in the future.

"I may recall any of the four young players released today at the end of the season, and will do so if their records warrant."

Harvard-Yale Ring Match Likely

New Haven, Ct., Jan. 8 (AP)—Possibility of meeting Harvard in boxing was seen today in a letter from W. J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, to G. V. V. Wolf, manager of the Yale boxing team, which stated that the Crimson authorities were considering a proposal to make boxing an intercollegiate instead of an intermural sport.

Should this proposal go through, Yale would like to close the season with a Harvard match on March 22. Yale boxers have met neither Princeton nor Harvard men, as those universities have not been on the schedule, but with a change at Harvard there would be the likelihood of an annual meet. Yale will meet Cornell, a new opponent, on March 8 at Ithaca, taking the date which formerly had been with Georgetown.

William Fitzgerald, who starred in the backfield as a halfback, has been chosen captain of the Lexington high school football sleven for next year. He succeeds Philip Lewis, who will be graduated in June. Fitzgerald is a junior Letters have been awarded to the eleven players and the manager: Capt. Philip Lewis. Captelect William Fitzgerald, Carl Chesley, Edward Montgomery, Duane Carpenter, Clifford Holtt, Arthur Rocque, Paul Ward, George Blume, Harold Wilson, Fred Graves, and Manager Alfred Mello. Fitzgerald's older brother, Thomas E. Fitzgerald, is coach at Brookline high.

Mass. Boxing Commission Puts O. K. on Art Shires

The Massachusetts Boxing Commission today decided after a meeting that Art Shires and Al Spohrer will be granted a license and that the match will take place Friday night, as scheduled, at the Boston Garden.

In a statement issued, the commission declared that it took up the reported New York objections to Shires, which it regarded as an investigation rather than punishment for an offense, and was ready to follow up New York in punishing Shires in case its investigation reveals any violation of the boxing law of that state.

The report of a meeting of the Illinois commission was also discussed, the commission said, at which Shires was completely exonerated of charges in connection with his bout with Dally of Cleveland which was held in Chicago.

The Massachusetts commission also declared that no complaints have been received to date in this state in relation to the recent activities of Shires or his associates.

MICHIGAN SIX PLAYS HARVARD

With Junie Stubbs and Sam Batchelder missing from the lineup, Harvard's remodeled ice six meets Michigan Tech at the Garden tonight.

The Cantabs are out for another high score victory. Johnny Garrison will start at center, as he did against Tech, and his supporting trio will be Captain Elliot Putnam and Bill Everett.

Young Barry Wood, who has been recently shifted to defense was shifted back to the forward line at the last moment today. Barry will be a relief center for Johnny Garrison.

Another important change in the Harvard machine affected by Joe Stubbs was the removal of Johnny Cross from the first string forward line. Cross will be present in the skating slump, and must be pulls out of it Coach Stubbs will keep him in the spares.

Cross may see service as a defense man tonight. He will then team with Cumningham, Harding or Charlie Lakin.

Garrison's move from left wing to center may be permanent. It all depends on how well Junie Stubbs can get back on the scoring end. If Stubbs does come back he is going to find lots of competition for his spot.

Michigan Tech, highly touted before their Eastern invasion as a terrorising sextet, has found the sledding very rough in the East. After battling Princeton to a tie, and then running against the Elis for a 15 to 0 pasting, they want to win over Harvard.

McMillen and Londos in Mat Feature at Mechanics

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

STEINKE TO BATTLE CALZA

JIMMY McMILLEN, former All-American football star of the University of Illinois, and Jim Londos, the Greek champion, will clash in the feature attraction of Billy Avery's all-star wrestling program at the Mechanics Building tonight.

It will be a finish match, two falls out of three.

The McMillen-Londos tussle is only one of five attractive bouts listed. The semifinal contest between George Calza the Italian champion, and Hans Steinke, the giant German, is attracting just as much attention as the windup. There will be a one hour time limit in this match.

TITLE BOUT PROMISED

If he is successful in pinning the Greek's shoulders to the mat the former Illini hero will immediately be matched with Dick Shikat the recognized world's champion in New York and Pennsylvania.

Londos has never in his 12 years of campaigning met a wrestler of McMillen's type. The latter is unquestionably one of the most spectacular grapplers living. His rough tactics are far superior to Gus Sonnenberg's.

From every point of view tonight's bout promises thrills galore for the spectators. Promoter Avery predicts it will be the most exciting duel of the season.

CALZA MEETS STEINKE

The Calza-Steinke semifinal is also a very important one. Both men have a match pending with Shikat in Philadelphia and New York upon the outcome of tonight's struggle. It promises to be one of the most gruelling and bitterly contested feuds of the program. Great rivalry exists between the two men.

In the third match Carl Pojello, the lithe Lithuanian, goes to the mat against John Paxos, the new Greek champion who defeated Charley Fox, the Cleveland policeman, here last week.

BRUINS MAKE IT 13 STRAIGHT

Game starts at 8:30.

St. John Beavers, formerly the Fusiliers and one of the most powerful hockey teams of the Maritime Provinces, will meet University Club in the first of a two-game series in the Arena tonight.

A year ago, the Beavers defeated the Fusiliers, came down and split a two-game series with the clubmen, winning the first game, 3 to 1, and losing the second, 4 to 1. This time the objective of the Maritime boys is a complete clean-up.

The team is considered a great deal stronger than that of last year. It has been strengthened by the addition of several players from Nova Scotia.

Jackie Keating, the big little fellow of last year's team who scored three goals and assisted in another in the first game with University, is playing center again for the visitors.

Golfers Play on Berkshire Course

Williamstown, Jan. 8—Golf in January was the unusual event for Northern Berkshire, when Richard Baxter, professional, and Thomas Danaher, his assistant, enjoyed a friendly 18-hole match on the course of the Taconic Country Club here. Usually the local links are banked with snow at this time of year and the most popular sport for winter sports, it is the first time that a round of golf has ever been played here in January.

Passing the Puck

NOW that the Bruins have put across their thirteenth straight victories, there is no telling when they will be stopped. Incidentally, the 3 to 0 win last night was the nineh straight over the Rangers and also the first shut out of the season turned in by the Stanley Cup holders.

One of the wildest crowds in the history of hockey in this city packed itself into the Garden last night to lend their support to the Bruins. From the opening face off the final whistle the Garden was in an uproar.

After the Bruins and the Rangers had battled for 38 minutes and 16 seconds, Bill Carson flipped a backhander into the nets for the opening tally. It was one of the prettiest plays of the year, for Carson was on his wrong wing when he took a beautiful pass from Mickie McKay and rifled home a shot which had John Ross Roach beaten all the way.

Speaking of Bill Carson recalls to mind that the little Bruin was right at the top of his form last night and working like a Trojan from start to finish. Carson had been taking a fine licking from the hard checking Ranger defense men, but he is right at home against that style of play so was not affected by his bumps.

The game was played on the worst ice the Garden has ever offered. Starting about the middle of the first period the humidity in the Garden began to get in its work on the surface, and before the close of that chapter the east end of the rink was well covered with water.

Bun Cook handcuffed Tiny Thompson with a shot from the blue line in the second period, but the puck went over instead of into the net.

Yip Foster drew a minner for putting George Owen into the boards, but his infraction, charging from behind, calls for a major penalty.

Dutch Gainor was forced to retire in the third period because of the charlie horse he pulled in Montreal last Saturday night. Dutch was noticeably lame from the start and after he had been bumped around for a while he was in bad shape and Manager Art Ross ordered him to the dressing room.

The type of hockey played by the Rangers far surpassed that of a week ago, and failed to meet with the approval of the fans but it was necessary due to the fact that the New Yorkers are shorthanded. They have 11 men and a boy available for action.

As Lester Patrick's contract with the Rangers expires in April, there will be a showdown between the New York manager and the Madison Square Garden. Lester would like to remain in the N. H. L. but there are many conditions which must be ironed out before he will consider staying with the Rangers.

The Rangers tossed or rifled every known variety of shot at Tiny Thompson but without success.

By the way, Paul Thompson has never scored on Tiny, since they came into the N. H. L.

McCOY IN FINE CONDITION FOR BOUT

Bob "Bibber" McCoy of Cambridge, challenger for the heavy, weight wrestling championship of the world, will finish heavy training today at Toland's Gym, and tomorrow night, when he steps on the mat against Gus Sonnenberg at the Arena, the pride of Dan Bridge will be in the best condition of his career.

Two years ago neither Sonnenberg nor McCoy knew a toe hold from an arm lock. Sonnenberg was struggling automobiles at one of Providence and McCoy was trying to crash into the big leagues with Detroit as a pitcher.

Now in a twist in fortune they are ready to battle for the heavyweight wrestling championship. Sonnenberg has pursued a spectacular course for the past two years. Behind a flying tackle that has smeared all opposition, he rose to wealth and a title.

The most colorful figure in the history of the game, his career has been packed with drama, from the night he first battered Joe Ludlow to defeat before a crowd of a few hundred in Providence until the night he met Strangler Lewis before a crowd that packed the Boston Garden to its rafters.

McCoy's friends will turn out by the hundreds tomorrow night. The Bibber started his athletic career with Rindge Tech in Cambridge, followed it with a brilliant career on the diamond and gridiron at Holy Cross, and continued with a smashing game as end of the Dibsquad eleven in Somerville.

He has made many friends, and they will back him to the limit against Gus the Goat.

A brilliant preliminary card will precede the main bout. George Kotsonaros, capable movie actor, and an even better wrestler, will attempt to keep his winning streak intact in the semifinal bout when he meets Joe Rogaski, youthful Polish star, who has been cutting a wide swath through the Middle West.

CALDER LOSING PRESTIGE

Hockey League was called and President Calder, without a protest, allowed a vote to be passed by the board of governors for the distribution of the Western players among other clubs because Boston, New York Rangers and Chicago.

The purchase of the Western Hockey League was the most progressive step ever taken in professional hockey. It was the making of the National Hockey League, for it placed a second club in New York and started major league hockey in Chicago and Detroit.

As the Western league deal was Adams' idea and was paid for by him, naturally he went after Calder and the governors. In order to prevent the conference of Western players by the league, C. J. Adams went to great expense and trouble, but finally Calder and the board of governors were checkmated.

Rest since that time the relations between the Boston promoter and the league president have never been cordial and suspicious. However, the falling out between Adams and Calder did not come to the surface until the annual meeting in Toronto last spring, when the Bostonian refused to shake hands with Calder.

Editor's note: The inside story of Ossie Owen deal will be unfolded tomorrow.

B. U.-Green Hockey Game Called Off

Hanover, N. H., Jan. 8 — The Dartmouth-Boston University hockey game which was scheduled to open the Green home season here today was called off today because the new indoor rink will not hold water long enough to allow it to freeze. Building experts were working on the problem this afternoon in the hopes of having the rink in shape for the Yale encounter here Saturday.

Ruth Asks $85,000 and 3-Year Contract

By NICK FLATLEY

BABE RUTH refuses to work for $75,000 a year. The famous Sultan of Swat is holding out on the Yankees.

He was offered a two-year contract, calling for $75,000 per, and turned it down with the well known Ruthian air of disgust.

The Babe laughed at the Yankee terms, the highest ever proferred in baseball, and demanded a three year contract, at $85,000 per annum.

That broke up what was supposed to be a peaceful conference between the Babe and Col. Jake Ruppert, owner of the Yankees and Barrow business manager of the club was present probably as a referee. But Colonel Ruppert couldn't bring about any decision.

Col. Ruppert declares that his $75,000 was the absolute limit.

The Babe states that he isn't interested unless he can get that three-year agreement, with the $85,000. And there the situation rests.

There will be another conference before the Babe leaves for St. Petersburg, where the Yanks train, on Saturday. There always is a final conference in these holdout arguments.

Chances are that the big hitter will be signed ere he departs for the South. Now that the Yanks have slipped out of the champion class, they must have the Babe for his drawing powers.

Though nothing official has been given out the hitch comes on the length of the new contract. The Yankees naturally figure that the 35-year-old wonder will not go on forever.

They sense a breakdown in the offing, and do not care to be attached to an expensive contract, if, perhaps, Mister Ruth takes a sudden dive out of the baseball picture.

The Babe, doubtless, figures the same way. Time was when he had to sign up each year because he needed the money. But now he is independent, financially. For the past three years he has been tucking away the profits, and has a couple of annuities that assure him a goodly income for life.

WANTS MORE THAN LANDIS

Ruth who was offered $10,000 a year more than Commissioner Landis gets has been baseball's high salary player for the last seven years. He has come to realize, though, that he draws in the millions over the course of a season, and wants baseball to pay for it. And fans generally agree with him.

Ruth's demand for more money was based principally on his admitted drawing power in exhibition ball games. He packs the parks all over the circuit in the regular run of the season, but in addition, he drags in endless thousands at exhibition pastimes.

The Yankees because of Ruth, are the most sought after ball club in the game, for these off-day contests. Wherever the Bambino goes into the strick districts, the orchards are packed.

The Yankees on a conservative estimate, must clean up more than Ruth's salary on tank town games alone. The club has agreed not to overwork the Babe in these ultra-financial affairs this season, fearing for his physical condition. But they will have him as a magnet in the big touring towns, and, naturally now that he's a real business man, he wants part of the profits.

The Babe's contract may not be signed until the season is about to open. A couple of months' haggling would not be bad politics, for the Yanks. The thing has been done before.

RUTH MAY TARP $75,000

But Ruth will get what he asks or a compromise that is satisfactory to him. He doubtless would accept $75,000, if he could get three years of it.

Babe Ruth sits in the driver's seat. His exploitation has been predicted for five years or more, but invariably he comes through with a great season. He's an athletic marvel, and now that he takes care of himself there's no telling how long he may continue starring.

He is in a position similar to Jack Sharkey. The Boston scrapper told the Madison Square Garden to run around the block, and calmly proceeded to the battlefield at Miami.

And now he's going to fight Scott there.

Ruth will laugh at the Yanks, unless they surrender, and go to St. Petersburg. And he signed up down there. He means so much to baseball that there isn't a chance of his being punished into the cold.

Ruth's financial career has been the wonder of baseball. He has been famous ever since he broke in with the Red Sox as a left handed pitcher, away back in 1914.

RUTH HAS GREAT RECORD

Under Bill Carrigan, the burly Ruth became one of the great southpaws in baseball. He hung up a record of 21 scoreless innings in world series games, against the Brooklyn Dodgers in '18.

He began to hit the ball in '17, and Ed Barrow, then Sox manager, converted him into an outfielder. He was sold to the Yankees in 1919, for $125,000, a new high at that period.

He drew down $10,000 in '20 on a holdover Sox contract. He held out and was awarded $25,000 the next year. He became a great home run hitter in that campaign, and was given a five-year contract at $52,500 per.

He had a couple of slumps, but came back in 1926 to bang up a new homey record, and was signed for three more years at $70,000 each.

Dr. Blach's Daily Health Hint

EVERYONE should learn how to apply a dressing to a wound and how to bandage a finger, a limb, the trunk and the head. With a little practice even a child can become fairly skilful, and such knowledge is valuable in emergencies. First aid to injured should be taught

This Day in Our History

THE pamphlet, "Common Sense," was published by Thomas Paine on January 8, 1776. This was widely distributed and read by thousands. It was a simple argument for independence and has been called one of the chief aids to the Revolution. It stirred the country.

WHAT COUNTS IN GRACIOUSNESS AND CHARM

Resume of New Year's Good Resolutions on Beauty

By MARIA JERITZA

NEW YEAR'S DAY has come and gone. The excitement of the holidays has given place to the sober routine of everyday life. New Year's resolutions have in many instances gone into the limbo of things forgotten along with the year that is past.

May not this be an appropriate season for a little calm thought about beauty today and in the days to come while 1930 is bringing us our daily experience and opportunities?

Maria Jeritza

Resolutions adopted New Year's Day are largely emotional. They provide a momentary thrill but are not always backed by calm determination. One week after New Year's, sober second thought may give greater sincerity and determination to any resolutions you may make.

How would it be, then, to take a moment or two today to look over the real inner self? How is it with her? Is she making the same mistakes over and over? Did she learn any one thing in 1929 that will always count for her for grace and graciousness, charm and loveliness?

There is little hope for a woman who is satisfied with herself "as is." But look into the mirror of your own thoughts and feelings and see whether you cannot find a little room for improvement, then make just a few resolutions and stick to them!

How would this resolve be for a start: If you please, Year 1930, help me to hold my tongue when I should, to keep out of arguments and misunderstandings, to mind my own business and to be sympathetic and kind!

That resolution alone, if always lived up to, would give any woman such radiant charm that none would stop to think about any physical defects she might have, such as irregular features or a few pounds over or under weight.

Then, of course, there are practical points of grooming and exercise, sensible diet and complexion care which cannot be neglected if a woman hopes to be always at her best.

First of all in importance comes the daily bath. Whether it be a tub, sponge or shower, the daily bath should be the first rule of your complexion regimen. Keep your skin, not only your face but your entire body, clean by means of a daily scrubbing with warm soapsuds, and toned with softened cold water, then it should be clear and smooth, provided you have health to begin with. A nightly facial cold-cream cleansing should supplement this beauty measure.

How about your hair? It is a bit thin about the temples? Suppose you try a hot-oil treatment twice each week? Warm pure olive oil in a tiny enamel frying-pan then apply it about the edges of your hair near your forehead on two-inch squares of absorbent cotton. Let it remain 15 minutes, then scrub it out by going over your scalp and hair, wherever there are traces of oil, with a cloth dipped in warm soap-suds and rinse it out well with luke-warm, not cold, water.

Repeat both washing and rinsing over and over until the last trace of oil and soap is removed. This partial shampoo is practical and should encourage a soft, thick, gracefully growing of hair about your forehead.

Any oil that remains, rub into your cuticle and fingernails; it will do more than anything else to improve the appearance of your nails.

Find a becoming chic way of doing your hair, then stick to that method and learn to arrange it expertly and well so that it will always be an appealing feature of your beauty. A weekly trip to the manicure, and home care of your nails and hands each day, morning and evening, to keep you supple and graceful, eight hours' sleep nightly and, above all else, kindly, progressive thinking, should make each day of 1930 a New Year's Day of fresh charm, joy and loveliness for you!

ALPHABET QUILT—BLOCK 18—THE RABBIT

TO the children who know a rabbit only as a bunny this block is going to be a puzzle. Bunny begins with B and here is a bunny in a quilt block with the letter R. Nancy was glad that she had taught her young nieces that the right name for this furry, jumping, hopping creature was rabbit.

Rabbits are white, white and brown, gray or black. Nancy chose a white print with soft tan polka dots for her rabbit. She might have used any of the other colors with the exception of black. This quilt is too soft and quiet in its colorings to include solid black in its patterns. Of course a white material with black polka dots could well be used, if the dots are not too large and heavy.

For the tail Nancy used a small piece of Turkish toweling. She might have tufted a tail right on the white block by using candlewicking in white and bringing the tufts close together that a fluffy tail would have resulted.

The paper square was laid flat on the window pane. The 6½ inch square of white gingham was laid over it. With a sharp pointed lead pencil the rabbit and the letter were outlined.

Then the paper pattern was pasted onto a piece of light weight cardboard or tag board and dried under pressure.

BACK BLOCKS SUPPLIED

In the event you have missed any of the Alphabet Quilt blocks previously published in the Boston American, please send 5 cents for each block missing. Also enclose stamped, addressed envelope. Address Nancy Page, Boston American, P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass.

One club member wanted to know why Nancy always advised pasting this onto a cardboard backing. "Because newspaper is so flimsy that I am afraid you will lose the correct outline unless you have strengthened the pattern in some way. Of course, if you are sure you can cut it without tearing and can keep it flat on the cloth when you cut your patterns you need not bother to paste it to the cardboard. But I advise it. Turn, then, you have the pattern for future use. You may want to make another quilt. With cheap newspaper as a pattern you are going to find pieces torn off or creased."

After the paper pattern is dry the rabbit is cut out. A separate piece is cut for tail if you are applequing that. If you use the background material and candlewicking for tufting it is not necessary to cut the round pattern.

But all cloth is cut with a quarter inch allowance on all sides. This is turned under, basted in place and then the pieces are pressed.

They are laid over the pencilled outline on the white block and pinned in place. Appliqueing is done with fine, invisible, hemming stitch.

The letter R is embroidered in the same color fast embroidery cotton as used in all previous letters so flimsy that I am afraid you will lose the correct outline unless you have strengthened the pattern in some way. Of course, if you are sure you can cut it without tearing and can keep it flat on the cloth when you cut your patterns you need not bother to paste it to the cardboard. But I advise it. Turn, then, you have the pattern for future use. You may want to make another quilt. With cheap newspaper as a pattern you are going to find pieces torn off or creased."

After the paper pattern is dry the rabbit is cut out. A separate piece is cut for tail if you are ap-

Sometimes Parents May Be in Error.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

DOES mother always know best? Is mother always right? These questions are the theme of many a letter I receive.

In other generations advice given a girl who questioned her mother's wisdom was to this effect: "Tut, my dear, your mother knows best, and she is right. Always and under all circumstances do as she says."

Beatrice Fairfax

But today, young folks are not quite satisfied with that advice.

"My mother is narrow-minded and prejudiced," declares Sally. "She's mentally in a rut and she won't listen to new ideas or to reason."

"It's foolish to say mother is always right," argues Betty. "She drinks more cocktails than she should, smokes more cigarettes than any girl I know and is profane when she loses her temper. She and dad go to wild parties and imitate the swiftest set of the younger generation."

To these girls, and others who are puzzled and resentful because of differences in viewpoint at home I would suggest: Your parents are not always right. Sometimes they set a gloriously fine example—oftentimes they are mistakes or over timid

It is quite possible that you may be right and your parents wrong, in case of clashing opinions. You live in touch with new ideas, latest theories. You are young and energetic and hopeful. The enthusiasm of your youth may be directly in the line of success, whereas their conservatism may count for failure.

Jim writes me that he is a born dreamer and his great ambition is to see the world, so when he finished school two years ago he wanted to join the navy, but his family "busted that plan." Next came a plan to work his way through college, which they also nipped in the bud. At present Jim explains he is employed in an office, doing work he loathes, and his father is demanding all his salary each week.

He wants to pack up and leave home, but hesitates because he feels he may still owe his family a debt for giving him his schooling. Jim adds that he is nineteen.

I agree with you, Jim, that you owe your parents something in return for the schooling they gave you. Admitting they may not understand you and your disposition, they have spent money and affectionate effort in giving you an education and a start in life.

Moreover, until you are 21 they are legally responsible for you and your actions. So why do you not wait a couple of years, working out their plans for you, until you are of legal age? That will give you time to think over your dreams and plans. At 21 you will know better than you do today just what you want most of all to do and be—what worthwhile adventures call you.

Elsie decided the other day that she knew what she wanted to do better than her parents did, so when they forbade her marriage to a young college student until both had finished school, the two eloped and were married and now they are drudging to make ends meet on their combined wages, living in tiny walkup flat.

As a matter of fact, both Elsie and her husband are conscientious, eager youngsters, very much in love with each other. That step they took in marrying, with their education incomplete and practically no means of livelihood, was merely daring, misguided idealism.

In this case, despite the enthusiasm of young love, despite the self sufficiency of youth and its radical theories, Elsie and her Dick would have gained, not lost, through following the counsel of her parents and waiting a couple of years. Yes, in nearly every instance interfering parents have wisdom and good sense on their side when they try to control the plans of their children.

They get a better perspective on your problems of happiness than you do, if only because you are feeling so intensely you cannot think clearly. They have lived longer and realized dangers and pitfalls ahead that you cannot see.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Mad people, bad people, sad people . . . all of them in some sort of a jam. AND NEARLY EVERY ONE OF 'EM BLAMING SOMEBODY ELSE FOR THAT JAM. ALTHOUGH, AS A MATTER OF FACT, THEY HAD WISHED IT ON THEMSELVES.

Elsie Robinson

Funny how easy it is to wish trouble on ourselves. And we don't need to DO anything, either. We just THINK entirely too much . . . and dream our way into disaster.

Never consider how many things you'll do in your mind that you wouldn't dare to do in real life . . . things you'd be ashamed to have the neighbors catch you doing? Usually it begins when you're bored. Or nursing a grouch. Or getting fed up with things in general. You'd like to start something. But you're afraid. It might get you in wrong at home, or down in the office. People might talk. You don't really do anything . . . YOU THINK ABOUT IT, INSTEAD.

Fiddlesticks—suppose you did pull that row with Bill. Gosh, you'd show that bozo where to head in! You'd give him what was coming to him! . . . And so, for an idle hour, you speculate about what you'd like to do to Bill, and you get yourself in a fine imagination, doing it. Then the next day, you speculate a little bit more. You give him two socks on the jaw instead of one. You mention a few more highly personal facts. Presently you're staging regular knock-down-and-drag-out fights with Bill in your imagination whenever you have a spare moment . . . wallowing in your dislike . . . getting madder every time you think about him. But surely there can't be any harm in that . . . ?

Or perhaps you're a sentimental lady with a lot of leisure and a husband who doesn't thrill you as he did once. Maybe you'll be any danger in PRETENDING that you're having a flirtation with that stunning man across the hall . . . ? Of course you wouldn't REALLY do it . . . you're not that kind of a girl. But, just suppose you weren't married. . . and suppose he did fall for you. . . .

Or maybe you're sick of being an underpaid cashier in a small bank. Wouldn't it be wonderful if those dollars that pass through your hands were really yours! You toy with the thought. . . you speculate on what a lot of money you could make in the market if you had just a temporary loan of a few hundred. . . you see yourself swelling out in new clothes at some fancy hotel . . .

Then some fine day you find yourself on the wrong side of the bars serving a sentence for embezzlement. . . .

And you wonder how you got there!

You got there because you THOUGHT yourself there. Those "innocent harmless" meditations were just so much dry rot. . . spreading insidiously through your character . . . eating away your healthy scruples and standards . . . crumbling your barricades . . . until at last you stood defenseless before temptation and the IMAGINED act leaped into terrible REALITY . . . Beware of your imagination! "As a man thinketh so is he!"

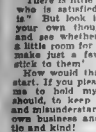
By CONSTANCE CAMERON

NOT so many years ago, when a man owned a business of any kind he ordered it ebbed in every kind of work around the place. Men were hired to do the manual labor, but the boss kept books, sometimes, figured out the makeshift rest systems, and often, the sample of his product into his pocket and faced forth as a salesman.



Constance Cameron

I don't say that these one-man enterprises never made money, because they often did. But compare them with the highly running factories and business houses of today, where a man is hired to do WHAT HE CAN DO BEST. "The best" attracts, but there is a bookkeeper who couldn't dictate a letter to save his soul. There is a salesman who couldn't balance the books if his life depended on it, and so on. It is an age of specialization.

We are at last coming to the realization that we can't all do everything, but we can each do SOMETHING superlatively well.

Enlightened educators are carrying these ideas into the schools and, I may add, are having hard sledding with the parents, who don't quite grasp the idea of letting Johnnie advance with his class when his spelling is hopeless, instead of making him stay in one grade until his studies receive uniform success, or weep with indignation when it is suggested that Mary be put in a "special class" because she hates her title seems to spell disgrace to them, but not after it is thoroughly understood and understood.

I never can quite understand the average parent's tenacious ambition for the sons and daughters in entering the "professions" in mind, that is in turn Mary out a writer or librarian or a teacher, and Johnnie a lawyer or doctor or writer or statesman isn't it better to have Johnny grow up to be a fearless bricklayer than a fourth-rate lawyer? I think so. Anything he can do well is what he should do, and there is room and plenty of respect for the person who is doing a certain line of work and excelling in it. We can't all do the same thing, and the time has passed when we are expected to do a little of everything. One thing beautifully executed will bring success. Perhaps this trend is the outgrowth of the hue and cry for "efficiency."

If your child has an aptitude for any kind of work, see that he gets a chance to pursue that work, even though he never amounts as a literary student. And help the struggling educators who are trying to make the curriculum fit the child rather than make every child fit into a hide-bound curriculum.

Enlightened educators are carrying these ideas into the schools and, I may add, are having hard sledding with the parents, who don't quite grasp the idea of letting Johnnie advance with his class when his spelling is hopeless, instead of making him stay in one

Miss Pat -:- Thrilling Romance of Airways

His light had not picked out the bottom of this formidable pit. He'd drawn for it with a shudder. He had not willed to see its floor.

But now for the fourth time he went along that gallery parallel to the entrance. Here Sheik sensed they had gone. Here the child had cried. Distinctly they had heard it. All along were avenues where sound traveled with piercing, uncanny sharpness. Last night, Sheik declared, the girl and the kid were in the lofty vault at the end of this gallery.

When Guy first saw these he trembled Queer, beseeching sounds came and meek little wild prayers at his lips Pat had left these! A thing like this, in her fright, she would surely have done. Here, too, was the empty tuna can.

He had gone on in a flame of hope. Abruptly the sounds ended. Fifty feet further the cave widened. In a great circular area. This semi-circle had a lofty ceiling. It had almost numberless niches and tunnels. And two long galleries, each with other turns.

Now Guy stood and played the light over the great area. He felt stifled. Perspiration stood out in big drops. He rubbed his neck—eased the strain there. He said aloud: "Wonder where I missed out—wonder which path she could have taken. This ends in a wall. That one has not turn. I've gone here—half a dozen times."

Now he was at that pit again. Now he lay on the floor, he leaned over the black drop and played his flashlight on its depths. He said to himself, hoarsely: "It has no bottom!"

He got up and went down one turn, reached the end of this and tried another. All along were bits of silk.

But suddenly and with such a violent trembling that he had to lean against the wall for breath; he had to battle with his hands against the fogs that seemed sucking at his brain—suddenly he found himself in a low, narrow passage. And here there were no bits of silk —no rocks. Here he had not penetrated before.

Hot, small hands pressed on her cheeks. Terrified whimpers went in and out of her ears. In a dream Pat heard. The remnant of her strength fought against consciousness—fought to remain in this kind half-faint.

Mechanically she tightened her hold on him. Mustn't let him wander away. He'd tried that. Sometimes he'd awakened and kicked at the walls—at her. Sometimes he'd been wild like that with fright. She murmured in a dull, muffled response: "It's night—sleep—"

"No—Oh, Pat—I'm sick—You and mother was coming! . . . Make her come—Pat—please!"

She was awake now. With a sickening chill she was fiddling with the flashlight. She was uttering aloud: "It's not out . . . it will come on—"

She struck the light and looked at her watch. In the flicker she saw that it was after nine. She said: "We'll get back. It's not so far—make the matches last—Billy, keep hold tight of my arm."

"You carry me—Pussy is tired—" "No, creep—"

She began to call. She cried out to the child: "Pray—we must pray!" They sank down on their knees.

She thought, with that faintness again creeping over her; with her thought sinking down again into that throbbing void: "We'll die like this—we're dying now—" And she called on Richard—she called wildly: "Father—oh my father—"

And came flying back in a song —a half-crazed rush of song: "Pat—oh, heart—Pat—it's you—YOU!"

Then she saw light—a great golden light Then she was lifted. Strong, mighty wings went under and lifted her body and the body of the child.

Gloves in the Ballroom

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I have been invited to a senior affair of a university. It is to be a formal affair. Is it necessary for me to wear gloves while in the ball room?

2—As I have no evening wrap, would it be proper for me to wear my coat? E. G. G.

1—Although there has been much discussion about the wearing of long white gloves with formal evening wear, the fashion has not much "caught on." Even in the Golden Horseshoe of the Metropolitan Opera House, where formality is supposed to reach its pinnacle in clothes, one sees very few women wearing long white gloves. At the dances there will probably be a few girls wearing evening gloves, but I'll wager not more than five or six. So you needn't wear them, you are, and if you' don't, you will still be correctly dressed!

2—If your coat is a fur cat, it won't look out of place, but if it is the usual street coat, it will, I am afraid. Haven't you a sister who will come to your rescue and most kindly lend you the glory of her evening coat?

Boy Wins His Battle

By LUCY LOWELL

MY Youngest Friend informed me the other day, with a funny little blithe twinkle, that he had passed with an "A" in arithmetic—the highest grade in his class.

Lucy Lowell

Now it chanced that I remembered several confidences of my Youngest Friend's mother not such a great while back. The boy, she professed, didn't mind studying anything but arithmetic. For which, she also told me, she couldn't blame him a lot since she herself—as also did I myself—despised arithmetic.

"Did you like arithmetic?" I asked him.

He said no. "But I sort of had to get the best of it, didn't I? And while I was doing it I thought I might as well do it right. So I got A."

Good youngster. Just at the edge of his teens he has learned what some of us spend whole lives learning, that obstacles are meant to be conquered—not avoided.

My Youngest Friend has conquered his first enemy. He has achieved an A in arithmetic. But he has done more than this. He has fought his first real battle with himself. And won!

In the years to come there will be other harder battles for him, life being what it is. And because he has done this in the way he has he will fight them on a stronger arm, a clearer head, a higher heart.

The Real Truth

ABOUT COLOR
by ELINOR GLYN

I HAVE my own sitting room furquoise blue because it is an inspiring color for thought—pure blue is too spiritual for every day, and is apt to make one think in a less practical way, but turquoise, tending toward green, is practical and gay at the same time.

Color means so much. I hope you study this, girls, because a practical knowledge of color is one of the acquirements most necessary to enable you to express your personality.

She was not only extraordinarily intelligent and efficient, but very pretty in her white and complexion like a wild rose and eyes as blue as the sky.

I felt her color must represent youth and love, so I had her worst room arranged all in a bright "Antarctic Beauty Rose" going to a little deeper crimson, which always the pure color of the heart of a rose.

We had Chinese scarlet lacquer furniture stippled with a coat of magenta over it, so that everything glowed with soft warmth. The ceiling was silver.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Hashes or mince are much improved if the meat is soaked in the gravy or stock some time before being reheated.

Equal parts of granulated white and dark-brown sugar, with one-half the quantity of water added and boiled until of desired thickness, makes an excellent substitute for maple sugar.

YOU WASN'T AN ORPHAN WHEN YOU WAS LITTLE WAS YOU, UNCLE DADDY? — YOU HAD PARENTS AN' ANCESTORS AN' EVERYTHING DIDN'T YOU?
SURE I HAD THE FINEST FATHER AND THE GRANDEST MOTHER AND MORE AND BETTER ANCESTORS THAN ANY MAN IN ALL IRELAND!
IT'S MESELF THAT'S DESCENDED FROM DERMOT O'FLINN, HIMSELF, WHO WAS KING OF IRELAND WHEN IRELAND RULED THE WORLD — AND A FINE KING HE WAS — HE LIVED IN A CASTLE MADE OF GOLD — ALL THE FURNITURE IN THE CASTLE WAS MADE OF GOLD, EVEN GOLD SPRINGS IN THE BEDS — HE ATE OFF GOLD PLATES, AN'— — HE HAD THOUSANDS OF SLAVES AND VASSALS AT HIS BECK AND CALL AND WHEN HE ROARED HIS COMMANDS ANYONE WHO DISOBEYED HIM HAD THEIR HEADS CUT OFF, AN'— STOP YOUR BRAGGIN' AN' BOASTIN' — NO ONE HEARS YOU — THE POOR, TIRED LITTLE LAMB IS FAST ASLEEP.
LOOK AT THE DARLIN' — SHE'S SMILIN' IN HER SLEEP — THAT'S A SURE SIGN THE ANGELS ARE WHISPERIN' TO HER — SHE MAY BE JUST A POOR LITTLE MOTHERLESS ORPHAN TO THE REST O' THE WORLD BUT TO ME SHE'S AS GOOD AS ANY ROYAL PRINCESS — AND A GREAT DEAL BETTER!

TELL ME WHY YOU DON'T ACCEPT THOSE ROSES WHEN YOU DON'T KNOW WHO THEY'RE FROM?
WHAT AM I TO DO, DAD?
I CAN'T RETURN THEM WHEN I DON'T KNOW WHO IS SENDING THEM AND I CAN'T LET SUCH BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS WITHER ON OUR DOORSTEP
WHY NOT?
IF YOU DIDN'T ACCEPT THEM THE FOOL WHO IS SENDING THEM WOULD SOON GET TIRED OF WASTING HIS MONEY. YOU CAN BET ON THAT
BUT WHY LET THE ROSES GO TO WASTE WHEN I ONLY NEED TEN THOUSAND MORE TO MAKE AN OUNCE OF BEAUTIFUL PERFUME?

GIFFORD TALKS TO SAVINGS BANK WOMEN

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Harry P. Gifford, president of the Salem Five Cents Savings Bank talks before a session of the Eastern Group of the Massachusetts Association of Savings Bank Women this evening at the Hotel Vendome. Mr. Gifford, a former State Senator and former president of the National Assn. of Mutual Savings Banks, has just returned from a trip abroad. While overseas he addressed the meetings of the International Thrift Congress and he will tell of his trip and the thrift sessions.

• • •

Mrs. Virginia M. Pearson, assistant treasurer of the Whitman Savings Bank, chairman of the Eastern Group, will preside at the session to be addressed by Mr. Gifford. Although thrift has declined in some other sections of the country according to savings bank deposit figures, the latest New England figures do not reveal any drop in this section, where the spirit of Benjamin Franklin and others still goes marching on.

Postal receipts usually are accepted as furnishing an important index of general business and postal district receipts in December were $2,018,835 a gain of $26,810 over the like month of 1928

HARRY P. GIFFORD

It some make an exception of December in accounting postal receipts as a business index, because of the great volume of holiday communications, and the more wholehearted observance of Christmas in some sections of the country than in others.

• • •

Following the Christmas season Fred Eastman, the Bow going after business with typical energy, suggesting to "customers" the improved possibilities for handling third class mail Postmaster Gow was drafted from the business world, is therefore able to set new precedents for energetic conduct of postal affairs.

"The good stocks are finding new homes every day," says a Wall Street optimist. On the other hand, a pessimist explains it is probably because the banks are liquidating the shares they hold as collateral, and forcing them into the strong boxes of outright holders. It seems not to have occurred to anyone to ask what better collateral banks could find than the good stocks on which collateral could be nearly as speedily marketed.

• • •

"Frozen assets" caused all the bank failures of 1929 that were not due to thefts Issues listed on the New York and Chicago Stock Exchanges are never included in "frozen assets."

• • •

Lyons.

• • •

William Augustus Read, Jr., and Clifton McPherson Miller retired from the firm of Dillon, Read & Co. on January 1.

• • •

William de Krafft has been elected a member and chairman of the finance committee of the United States Rubber Co. and in addition he was elected a member of the executive committee and vice-president of the company.

• • •

• • •

Unconfirmed Wall st. rumor had a $40,000,000 cash offering for Amoskeag Woolen in the offing. This is considerably less than the big company's quick assets, current liability in circulation, also uncon firmed, was that Amoskeag control ler had changed hands or was about to do so.

• • •

Out of respect for the memory of Robert Winsor all the offices of Kidder, Peabody & Co. will be closed on Thursday, January 9, except for the transaction of necessary routine.

SCARCITY SEEN IN HIGH-GRADE BOND ISSUES

New York, Jan. 8—A definite indication of the dearth of high-grade bonds existing at the present time was afforded today by the manner in which the $60,000,000 Insull Utility Investment, Inc., 6 per cent debentures were snapped up by investors and investment institutions throughout the country.

The offering of the Insull issue was the most important piece of financing since the sale of the $100,000,000 Texas Corp. 5 per cent debentures early in October.

In view of the uncertainty created by the break in the stock market in October and November, many investment interests had felt that it would be prudent to test the bond market with an issue of much smaller proportions.

The heavy oversubscription of this huge amount of financing, however, has materially improved sentiment in investment circles, and it is felt that several other important issues will be offered in the near future.

In this connection it may be pointed out that many of the leading investment institutions have large amounts of funds available for investment, but are unable to employ them in bonds already outstanding due to the fact that most of these issues are closely held.

It is a significant fact that whenever either a large individual investor or investment organization seek to place their funds in the high grade issues they are compelled to "bid the market up" for themselves.

Thus, few investors are desirous of placing their money in these issues, but prefer to stand on the side-lines awaiting new issues that prove attractive.

In view of the success of the Insull offerings, it is quite likely that companies offering bonds in the future will make similar offerings, namely, a debenture bond carrying stock purchase warrants that also is convertible into stock.

This type of financing should prove extremely popular in the current year, particularly in so far as utility companies are concerned. These enterprises, it is understood, are likely to be rather heavy borrowers to further their expansion programs.

HOG RAISERS 'OVERPAID'

Chicago, Jan. 8 (AP)—Higher prices than supplies warrant were paid by most packers in American hog raisers in 1929, F. Edson White, president of Armour & Co., said today in his annual report which forecasted sales for the company again exceeding $900,000,000.

"A decrease in cattle supplies such as had been expected came about in 1929, but the expected decrease in hog supplies failed to materialize, and, in fact, turned to an increase," the report stated.

"The packing industry paid prices for hogs which were higher than were warranted, and the year's operations in the pork end of the business were unsatisfactory."

Armour & Co. during the year paid producers of livestock $287,000,000 for cattle, $196,000,000 for hogs, $54,000,000 for sheep, $26,000,000 for calves and $77,000,000 for poultry and dairy products, the report said.

Net sales of the company during the fiscal year ended November 2, 1929, were $9,810,518 after all charges, giving the class A common stock 40 cents a share dividend.

Stock Outlook for 1930; Some Lines Rebounding

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—Attempting a 1929 forecast I said in this column exactly a year ago:

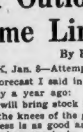
"What 1929 will bring stock marketwise is on the knees of the gods. One man's guess is as good as another's. Mine happens to be that, whatever further success the bulls may be destined to reach by the early part of the year, they will reach the end of their tether long before the end of 1929.

"In the face of monetary conditions, it is not conceivable to this writer that any speculative whoopee can be furiously kept up throughout the year . . .

"It is entirely possible that 1929 will witness prosperity in business generally, but not increased prosperity in stock speculation.

I also wrote last January:

"What the early part of 1929 will witness further marking up of stock quotations is the general expectation. The writer is free to state that upon credit will cause the speculative boom to collapse this year. Fear, too, that disturbances in Wall Street will be sufficiently severe to have some adverse effect upon industry and general business."



B. C. Forbes

It was not difficult to foresee a year that was to store for Wall Street, and it was safe to predict that business would continue active until the imminence of a stock crash became generally recognized.

One cannot be equally emphatic in attempting to forecast the course of industry and securities during 1930. That outlook now is less clear. However, here is my guess:

The stock market will achieve a recovery exceeding current expectations.

After early irregularity, the recovery will become more pronounced. Movement may be desultory for a brief spell during the summer, but the approach of fall, I believe, will witness a substantial upswing in activity, confidence and strength.

* * *

The money market probably will disappoint those who look for phenomenal ease. Call rates promise to continue to conform to relation to time rates, meaning cheaper day-to-day facilities than facilities for 30 days to six months.

A modest decline in demand rates and modest firmness in term rates will not be illogical.

* * *

Candidly, it takes courage—perhaps it would be better to say rashness—to attempt to forecast the course of industry and business.

The overwhelming impression is that business will be reasonably satisfactory, but that employment will not be equally satisfactory.

Such industries as motors and steel should enjoy almost immediate and emphatic rebounds from the irrationally low levels of recent weeks. Panic or no panic, the demand for automobiles will continue, continue on a scale warranting larger than that of the last two months. Railway buying of steel, as well as buying for heavy construction work by governments should help to keep the steel industry at least normally active.

In most other industries timid recovery rather than a rebound is suggested. Ordinary building operations generally will fall materially below the records attained in recent years.

General retail trade will do well if it does not prove subnormal. Rambunctious spending must not be counted on, certainly not in the first half of the year.

The Department of Agriculture declares that the increasing power of our far-flung agricultural population promises this year to equal last year's, a comforting statement.

* * *

Unemployment involving political and other agitation, threatens to be the bete noir of America's future. Science, chemistry, invention, managerial skill, cheap electric and gas power have combined to effect tremendously increased production without corresponding increase in human labor. Endless mergers also promise employes of all ranks—executives, superintendents, salesmen, clerks, technicians, all-round-ability workmen.

This is the supreme problem challenging America's industrial, financial, business statesmen. The task does not call for a Chamber of Commerce committee, but for an Institute of Economic Coordination headed by an organising genius and wholeheartedly supported by the ablest leaders in every alk of our economic life. President Hoover's admittedly temporary Unemployment Council should give place as speedily as possible to a more weighty body not unlike the large if any Chamber of Commerce.

Properly tackled, this most fundamentally serious of our economic and social problems should not prove insoluble by the brilliant brains this nation happily possesses.

* * *

To sum up, a year from now both stocks and business should be on a substantially better basis.

Outlook for Investment Trusts in 1930 Discussed

By SAMUEL UNGERLEIDER
President Ungerleider Financial Corp.

THE year 1929 was notable for a tremendous increase in the number, importance and resources of American investment trusts or financial corporations. Prior to 1927 the name "investment trust" was almost unknown in financial circles in this country, although a handful of companies had been operating in this field for some years.

During the years 1927 and 1928 the growth became more rapid and the end of the latter year was marked by the creation of the first $100,000,000 company.

The success enjoyed by companies attending the offering of the shares of this first mammoth corporation in the field and the 27 corporations commanded by its shares immediately thereafter, combined with large 1928 earnings reported by nearly every company then engaged in this field, all contributed largely to the creation of market conditions particularly favorable for the creation of new financial corporations.

As a result, in the first nine months of 1929, a total of over 200 such companies is known to have been formed, with capital probably aggregating nearly two billion dollars. The movement culminated in September, when a total of $643,000,000 securities of financial corporations were offered for public subscription.

The outlook for these companies in 1930 is difficult to appraise at the present time, since their annual reports have not yet been published, and only a comparatively small number have issued reports indicating how well they fared in the recent panic.

It seems proper to say, however, that the reports thus far published by a number of leading corporations indicate that, in general, they have passed through the most severe storm in financial history without serious damage.

A substantial number of these companies have maintained themselves in such a strong position that even though they may have suffered a depreciation of 20 per cent or more in value of the securities held, this depreciation affects only a small proportion of their total assets.

If the record of those companies which have not yet reported proves as good as the ones which have already frankly told their stockholders just how they stand, there is little doubt that the American investing corporation will have fairly well demonstrated the ability of its management to pass through a period of exceptional stress practically unscathed.

It is not to be expected, however, that the reports of the many companies which have not yet given out information as to their positions will show that they, too, have some severe losses have been incurred by the less conservative or astutely-managed corporations.

After all, the vital factor to be studied in appraising the merit of the financial corporation is the ability of the management. It is hardly conceivable that all, or even a majority, of these companies which were formed during the last year, can have secured well trained and high-grade management staffs.

This lack of satisfactory organization will probably find its reflection in the financial statements that will soon be issued by a number of companies.

During the next thirty to sixty days it is probable that the large majority of the leading financial corporations will publish their statements for the year 1929. After these have been issued, it will be possible, as a result, to form a grading of the data presented to arrive at a more satisfactory conclusion as to the outlook for the share of such companies in 1930.

Despite the absence of data regarding the present status of a large number of companies in this field, the following generalizations regarding the position of a number of the large and well sponsored corporations, would appear warranted by the data thus far published.

Every Division of Auburn Has Profit

Chicago, Jan. 8—Every division and subsidiary of the Auburn Automobile Company operated at a profit in 1929 for the first time during the company's period of expansion, it was stated yesterday by E. L. Cord, president.

"Four companies have been secured by Auburn in the past three years," Mr. Cord said. "Only one of these was a profitable, going concern at the date of acquisition, but all of them had sound products and good plants, that served to strengthen our position of the Auburn company in the automobile industry. Until these purchases had been made, Auburn, to a large degree, was dependent upon outside sources for its production."

Farm Equipment's Outlook Favorable

Chicago, Jan. 8—The Oliver Farm Equipment Co.'s 1929 net available for dividends was reported today at $2,700,000 and $2,900,000, against $3,094478 for the constituent companies in 1928. Net for this year is expected to be sufficient to cover preferred dividends with some balance available for common. Sales for 1929 approximately equaled those of predecessor constituents companies for 1928. Outlook for 1930 is favorable. The company enters the year with practically no tractors on its inventory and but a moderate stock of other farm equipment, indications point to a record year for tractor sales with outlook for all agricultural implements satisfactory.

Anglo-Chilean to Erect New Plant

Anglo-Chilean Consolidated Nitrate Corporation has completed the erection of a unit at its Maria Elena nitrate plant for the recovery of iodine as a by-product.

Dividend Increase by Intertype Corp.

Intertype Corp. declared quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common, placing the stock on a $2 annual basis. Previously, the company had been paying 25 cents quarterly and 25 cents extra quarterly. Dividend is payable February 15 to stock of record January 31.

Pays Initial Dividend

National Distillers Products declared initial quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common, payable February 1 to stock of record January 20, placing the stock on a $2 annual basis.

BOND MARKET PRICES BETTER IN NEW YORK

By JOHN I. COOLEY

New York, Jan. 8 (AP)—Prices improved today in the most active bond markets of the new year. Although rates on time money were unchanged during the forenoon, a slightly easier tone was reported and a larger demand for fixed income securities of the investment description was evident, particularly in all sections of the list.

Sales during the first two hours of the session exceeded the volume for the same Tuesday period by $1,320,000. The liveliest turnover was most noticeable in the rails and the low coupon bonds made some solid gains.

Louisville & Nashville 4½s, Southern Railway (Mobile & Ohio) collateral 4s, New Haven 2½s, Norfolk & Western 4s rose more than a point. Union Pacific first 4s were marked up by nine points. Pacific general 4s and refunding 5s, New Haven 4½s, Northern Pacific general 3s and Missouri-Ohio Southwestern 5s also attracted buying.

United States governments responded to the improved money markets by making a small rise, with the earlier trading focused on the fourth liberties and the Treasury 4¼s. Foreign bonds were very firm. German Republic issues were in hands in large volume, but fluctuated narrowly. Brisbane City 8s rose nearly 3 points, while Italian and French government issues improved by minor fractions.

There was only moderate activity in the utilities, but most of the liens trading commanded better prices. Industrials were steady and issues which had lost ground earlier in the week recovered their recessions.

Convertibles again lagged on an irregular price trend. Public Service of New Jersey took a point on a small sale and American Telephone 4½s, after an active opening, settled back into the dullness that has characterized the recent trading in issues. Inheritance taxes in blocks of which are now being exchanged for stock.

The day's offerings were light. A $2,432,000 issue of Trenton, N. J., 4½s was marketed at prices to yield 4.25 to 4.60.

The Pittsburgh & West Virginia Railway asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to issue $6,000,000 in additional first mortgage 30-year 5s to finance construction costs of an extension in Pennsylvania. Railroads have shown a hesitancy in seeking funds in the bond market until interest rates definitely decline.

Spanish Peseta at Lowest in Years

New York, Jan. 8 (AP)—A drop of approximately ¼ of one cent in the Spanish peseta today carried that monetary unit to 12.70 cents, the lowest point in several years. Weakness of the peseta today for some time has been attributed to political conditions in Spain.

Sterling cables displayed a loss of a cent to $4.87 and bar silver was quoted in London at 20 5-16 pence, an overnight drop of 5 pence. The easing of the exchange rate was believed to foreshadow a reduction in the Bank of England discount rate on Thursday. The silver markets have been weak since the recent reported collapse of a Chinese pool in the metal.

Auto Buying Aids Outlook for Steel

Youngstown, O., Jan. 8—The midwest iron and steel industry is stirred by the improved automobile steel buying, with bright prospects for further betterment in the near future. Automotive purchases of primary steels have stimulated the flat steel market substantially, leading interests as Newton Steel, producing full finished automobile sheets, are benefited. Expansion plant of Republic Iron & Steel is now in better operating basis than at any time in the past three months.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF MODERN HOMES

FINE POINTS OF MODERN HOMES

By BETTY BONNELL

OF all the phases the embrace homemaking along modern lines, there is no department of it all that I like better to deal with and discuss than furniture. Selection of and taste in furniture means a lot in making any home or apartment cozy. So true is this as a fact that it can safely be said that there is nothing quite so important to the woman head of the house than the proper furnishing of her home. I have found that quality constitutes a big factor in the purchase of furniture, not to eliminate the matter of economy, of course. The latter always to be considered. I am not going to write too lavishly on furniture this week. That is to say, I shall not deal with the outfitting of a palatial home, but rather I am inclined to discuss with the newlywed the outfitting of a small home or apartment.

Betty Bonnell

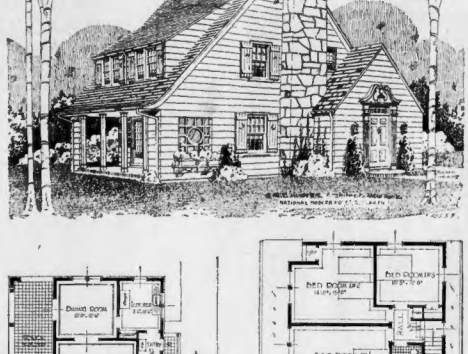
Very recently I have become impressed with the complete outfits available to new home makers, or those refurnishing small homes. One particular combination that has appealed to me is that which completely furnished a bedroom, kitchen, dining room and living room. Let me tell you about it briefly.

The bedroom outfit consists of a large dresser, a full chest of drawers, or what is sometimes termed a chiffrobe, a choice of a full or the new Hollywood Vanity, and a most attractive full-sized bed with comfortable mattress and spring. Of course, a dandy vanity bench or chair goes along. The kitchen, let us say, consists of a five-piece painted breakfast suite in any of the modern colors. Next comes a 10-piece dining room suite, in which I would include a buffet, a modern designed table, an attractive china closet, a server and five well-cut, strongly constructed chairs, along with an armchair. Personally, I like these things in a combination walnut and gumwood veneers. Now comes the living room with the new three-piece overstuffed suites of worsted and mohair. They are stunning. Included with this I should select an attractive end table, a floor lamp and a table lamp and a davenport table by all means.

I have chosen this selection of furnishings for a four room apartment or home to talk upon because so very many couples who have sought my advice have asked about what I have described. It is interesting to note, also, that many have specified their desire to spend in the neighborhood of three hundred dollars.

You can well appreciate my pleasure upon finding an outfit as outlined above at the price named. The Warehouse Furniture Outlet, of 1010 Massachusetts ave., Boston, features these furnishings in keeping with my suggestions, not to mention other offerings really far too numerous to set forth here, and everything is conservatively priced.

Six-Room House at Cost of $9300



FIRST FLOOR PLAN

SECOND FLOOR PLAN

WELL DESIGNED HOME, WITH ATTRACTIVE EXTERIOR

By National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc.

HOMES should be designed with attractive exteriors. That is, they should be well proportioned and pleasing to the eye. No longer will the public tolerate the ugly misfits that passed muster a few years back.

A small simple house, even when built of the most simple materials, can, if properly designed, be a thing of beauty, and this at no increased cost over the commonplace type of house.

White shingle walls give a pleasing effect in both color and texture for a rural house; they are so refreshing in the contrast they afford with the green lawns and planting.

The large stone chimney laid up in various color stones often gives the desired color and texture, as is the case with the house shown herewith. Here the chimney is the main feature of the front.

This house, A-85, measures 33 feet, eight inches across the front, so a 50-foot lot allows generous space on both sides.

Cost—$9300.

COMPLETE working plans and specifications of the house illustrated above may be obtained for a nominal cost from the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc. Any technical questions regarding this house will be answered without cost or obligation. Address the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc. Real Estate Department, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. Refer to House A-85.

MODERN HOMES OFFER FIELD

"Aside from construction in hand and in sight for 1930, as indicated by reports from governors, mayors and others, there remains a big field of therefore neglected work for the whole building industry in almost every locality," D. K. Boyd says in a statement issued by the American Institute of Architects. "This field can be opened in two ways:

"First, by participation in the home modernization movement, so well established in certain communities. The majority of buildings have been allowed to deteriorate or become 'out of date' to an alarming extent and they should be rejuvenated without delay.

"Second, by the elimination of slums and modernization of the older sections of our growing cities. Fortunate, advantage is now being called by the Better Homes in America committees and women's organizations to the necessity of improving slum conditions."

LITERATURE on standard materials and products used in the construction of the modern homes will be sent to you if you will check the subjects that interest you and mail to the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc., Real Estate Dept., Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

DEPORT CORTES FROM MEXICO

Mexico City, Jan. 8 (AP)—Aniceto Aragon Cortes, Prince of Pignatelli, who traces his lineage directly to Hernando Cortes, conqueror of Mexico for 16th century Spain, has been ordered deported as a "pernicious foreigner."

It is charged he disposed of family archives of intense historical interest to Mexico to American millionaires and universities.

The newspaper Excelsior said some of the archives had been found even in the library of the U. S. Congress. Those archives, which the government announced December 31 had been turned over to it by Pignatelli, were said to be only bills and other administrative records of the Hospital of Jesus, founded by Cortes.

Hidden in the archives, or retained in the memory of the family of the prince, and possibly one or two Roman Catholic priests, is the secret of the burial place of the remains of Cortes, hidden to prevent desecration by the Indian and Creole Mexican population.

Alice Rhinelander Seeks Separation

New York, Jan. 8 (INS)—Mrs. Alice Jones Rhinelander, 27-year-old wife of Leonard Kip Rhinelander, today had taken the first legal step in her renewed effort to obtain a separation in this State from her husband.

Through her attorney, Mrs. Rhinelander mailed an application to Justice Morschauser of the Supreme Court for permission to serve her husband by letter and publication with notice of the suit.

Would Raise Bar Tests

Committee Proposes Full High School Course of Four Years for All Applicants for Admission

THE Committee on Legal Education of the Massachusetts Bar Association would raise the educational requirements for admission to the Bar.

All that is asked of the young person who wants to be examined for admission is evidence that his general education has included TWO years of high school, day or evening.

The suggestion of the committee is that full high school training—the FOUR-year course—be required as minimum evidence of scholastic fitness.

The committee in its report says the standard of the Bar is "already deteriorating." The same complaint has been made in other States.

There was a time, here in New England, when the way to the Bar was through the office of a practicing lawyer. "Finishing" school, the young candidate "read law" in a lawyer's office. It was much like an apprenticeship. Only the able lawyer attracted students, or student-clerks; only the young man of character and family was likely to find a chance. In his last year, if he was well-to-do, he might go to a law school.

But that was the day of the boarding and baiting stable, the blacksmith shop and the gas lamp.

Now, there are law schools everywhere, night and day. They turn out lawyers by the hundred.

Suggest a change in the method, a hoist of the "educational requirement," and you are denounced as one who would "close the door of opportunity to the poor young man." As if anyone COULD close that door upon the poor young man of ambition, plus ability, plus character.

Nowadays, a high school education may be had in New England by anyone who desires. That being the case, we should say the Bar Association suggestion is not unreasonable.

That it will reduce the number of lawyers who might be better employed otherwise we have our doubts. The State of New York has required four years in high school since 1907. The complaint there is that many applicants are without such mental training and development as would fit them for the profession.

What SHOULD be required of the candidate for admission to the Bar is not only knowledge and intelligence, but a high moral character for honesty and integrity.

The Refuge

By NELSON HARDING

Nelson Harding.

A refuge is provided for
The Federal killers, when they shoot,
And after them a stubborn door
Is closed upon the State's pursuit.

The sorry sight depicted here,
Too often seen throughout the land,
Of shelter given one who flees,
A smoking pistol in his hand.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—This has been a theatrical season of "ducks" and "turkeys." There have been only five outstanding hits along with three "left overs" of the season before. The market crash is a convenient alibi, but the truth is the theater has not toed its artistic mark.

Only two of the hits really deserve that rating. The others in any other season would be only fair performances. Some unbelievably bad trash has been offered at fancy prices. And as a result the Rialto for the first time in years is almost completely "cut rate."

I have, along with many others, gone home from the theater after the first act at six plays featuring recognized stars. They struggled bravely with such material as was given to them, but their artistry and personality could not fill the void.

The usual Broadway "angels" have been missing for some time, and as a result any number of productions have been backed by theatrical ticket agencies. One may acquire seats to almost any show in the cut rate markets these days—and best seats, too.

The rise of Joe Leblang is a striking illustration of the sweep of the cut rate business in New York. He is a millionaire many times over and one of the biggest holders of valuable real estate in town. His lee is one of the business romances of Broadway. "To Leblang" a show is part of the language.

He began with desk room in the corner of a Broadway drug store. Today he owns that valuable corner and the drug store is used chiefly to provide entrances to his remarkable cut rate agency in the basement. A dozen policemen are required to keep the crowds in line nightly at theater time.

Like a noisy brokerage office, a long line of clerks stand before the boards—listing attractions in cut rate. As they call out choice seats the takers rush for them. The first come first served formula is employed.

A Harlem cafe has something hotsy-totsy in a waitress called Laughing Gal. She is ebony black with pearly teeth, and walking about her duties is suddenly overcome by fits of wild laughter. It is so contagious the entire room for no particular reason is convulsed. She developed the stunt by accident as it is now paid $100 a week.

And another Harlem place is a cellar entirely lit by candles and offers the shadowy outline of a group of moaning singers chanting spiritual dirges—very creepy.

Crime statistics show New York is due for an unsolvable crime about every ten years. In the past thirty years were the successive mysteries of Dorothy Arnold, Joseph Elwell and Arnold Rothstein

A literary critic discovers that out of the 12 best novels written by Americans the past six years nine were written abroad. Only one was written in New York. He believes that aside from being away from metropolitan distractions the chief reason is the impetus of having avoided a certain literary clique here. "They have," he says with some heat, "sneered many timorous fledglings out of all desire to write, despite the fact that not one of them has done anything of literary importance."

A West 42d street curb has what is called a caricature smudger. Upon ordinary window glass he smears caricatures of passers by, using a white frosting and the tip of his finger. He works with lightning fastness and one he made of Al Smith is startling

The New York Telephone Company will correct you if you call it a French phone. It is, they aver, a hand set. Whatever they are they can have the durn things, I'm always talking into the wrong end anyway.

"You often have so much to say about New York's new rich," writes Ted B., "isn't it about time you were giving thought to the new poor?"

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

The treasury clinic has given two hundred million dollars back to taxable citizens.

This golden gravy represents income taxes and its is an amazing amount to people who think that a state of coma is punctuation.

However, all is not gold that draws interest. The government is a generous Indian giver and will tax all that certified bonus back again on March 15, rain or shine.

Harry Lauder received a little over a thousand and both are welcome. We hope that Harry gets his kilts pressed.

U. S. Steel tops the list with twenty-five million refund. When you make a mistake like that you can't blame it on your fountain pen.

The writer didn't get anything back. They must know that we once voted for William Jennings Bryan.

Senator Cotsens got a million, more or fewer. When a rich uncle dies it ain't to be compared with a rich uncle turning honest.

Ann Pennington, whose knees are prettier than Senator Cousens, and we will also spot you Harry Lauder, only got nine hundred.

These tax refunds are getting very popular and the Government can make itself unanimous by doubling the happy penalties. We will even take an Oxford scholarship in Atlanta.

Nobody would really believe that we resided permanently in Atlanta or Leavenworth because we have the serene faculty of always looking like a visitor.

In order to save the government a lot of painful bookkeeping, why not give it all back and stake the clerks to a holiday?

H. G. Wells Writes on "The Science of Life"

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and Geo. P. Wells

INSECTS.

THE insects are an enormous group; in the rich variety of their forms they surpass every other class in the animal kingdom—indeed, there are more species of insects alone than of all other animals taken together. Butterflies, moths, dragon flies, beetles gnats, mosquitoes, house flies, blow flies, daddy longlegs bees, wasps ants, fleas, bugs, lice, termites, grasshoppers, ear wigs, cockroaches—these are the most familiar forms, but there are many others.

H. G. Wells.

For the most part they are a host of nuisances. Some it must be admitted, are aesthetically satisfying and a few, such as bees and cochineal bugs and those insects which eat weeds or other insects or those which fertilize flowers have been found actually useful to man, but these are the few bright exceptions in a vast family of bloodsuckers, stingers, spreaders of disease and devourers of crops.

Some of these animals live in water—the larvae of gnats and dragon flies, for example, or the air-breathing water beetles—but the greater number, like the spiders, they breathe by means of a system of air tubes or tracheae.

They may be distinguished from other land arthropods by their possession of three pairs of walking legs; in addition the great majority of insects have a highly characteristic feature in their wings.

Alone among invertebrates, the insects have conquered the air, unless we consider the gossamer spider who floats along parachute or balloon fashion on his slender threads is also a conqueror.

The wings do not correspond to any of the appendages of a crustacean; they are different structures, sprouting, not from the belly, but from the back.

Typically, there are two pairs of wings—as, for example, in the dragon flies, where the wings are transparent and delicately veined, in the butterflies and moths, where they are colored and dusted over with prettily constructed scales, and in the bees, where the front and back pairs are fastened together by hooks so that they may beat together more accurately—but this arrangements may be departed from.

In the beetles only the hinder pair is used for flying; the front pair of wings forms a hard, opaque casing that covers and protects the delicate second pair when the latter are not in use. In the mosquitoes and commoner flies, on the other hand, the front pair are the ones which are used as wings or should be used; the hind pair are developed as tiny knoblike structures, the so-called "balancing organs."

Finally, many insects, such as the fleas and the spring-tails, have no wings at all.

A second respect in which the insects excel over other invertebrates is the surprisingly efficient degree of communal organization to which many of their species attain. There is only one other animal—man—which surpasses them in this respect.

There is one consequence of the possession of wings that is worth noting. The arthropods, as we have seen, have to moult in order to grow, and the insects are no exception to this rule.

But it is apparently impossible to moult the skeleton of a wing and then grow it again. An insect's wing is a delicate, tenuous structure; it consists of little more than a double film of chitin with an inviably thin layer of living tissue in between.

If the stiff outer film were cast off the inner layer would be quite unable to retain any sort of shape.

For this reason, the winged stage of an insect's life is invariably its last. For most of its life it simply creeps and eats and grows; once it cannot moult and its growth therefore ceases.

During its long childhood the insect is called a larva: in it often brief final stages, when it flies and reproduces its kind, it is called an adult or imago.

The difference of duration between the two periods may are very striking; in some of the may-flies the larva crawls and feeds for two years or more as a preparation for one day of winged love-making.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

A HUSBAND used to be a necessity or an achievement—something to brag about. But nowadays, he is just something that a girl has to explain—or apologize for.

When Mother got married, everybody said, "Thank Heaven!" and came around to congratulate her.

But now, when a girl marries, everybody says, "For Heaven's sake!"—and comes around to find out why she did it.

The truth is that, around the house, a husband is still as necessary as a clock, as impressive as a doorplate and as comfortable as a chaise-longue. But, nobody stays "around the house" any more!

And, at parties, a husband cramps your style and crimps your game. He seems to have no more place at a party than a pair of goloshes or a New England conscience.

Just as you are feeling right "in the picture," he trumps your ace or vanity with some "big, wholesome truth," such as that your liprouge is on crooked, or your back needs powdering.

Just as you are running along on all cylinders, he tells the man you have been vamping that you'll have to go home, now, on account of your sciatica, or because the baby may wake up—and your engine goes dead!

Besides, a husband at a party is as much responsibility as an expensive umbrella. You've got to drag him around on your arm all evening; because the moment you park him anywhere some other woman is apt to pick him up and walk off with him.

At parties there appear to be only two kinds of husbands. The kind that you have to drag there—and the kind that you have to drag home!

The kind that pays too much attention to other women—and makes your furious—and the kind that is always getting off in a corner with the stags, the punch-bowl or another woman.

The kind that tries to be "the life of the party"—and the kind that glumps around and looks as though he were waiting for the pall-bearers to arrive.

Oh yes, you can't do without a husband around the house. But the acute problem of what to do with a husband at a party will have to be settled by a White House conference.

Can You Believe It?

This Is Really How They Looked

(Copyright, 1930)

WHEN THE DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH CAME OF AGE

SCIENTISTS tell you that the earth is at least a million million years old, which in figures reads as follows: 1,000,000,000,000.

Ask them to prove it and they say: "The wonderful geological changes, glacial and other deposits, gradual hardening of the crust of the earth, etc., etc., would take at least a million million years."

These two pictures show you that no matter how long it takes the earth to change its appearance human beings do it very quickly.

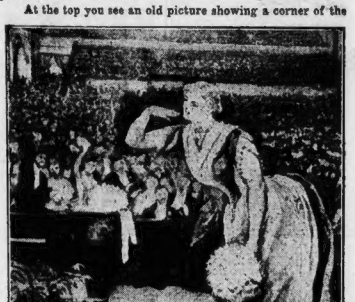
At the top you see an old picture showing a corner of the



CHRISTINE NILSSON'S CONCERT DRESS. YOU WILL NOT OVERLOOK THE BUSTLE

Since then the young Duke married Vanderbilt millions. It is said that his father-in-law, the late William K. Vanderbilt, gave him seven millions to start with, and put new plumbing and other things in Blenheim Palace.

Also since then the Duke has got a divorce, and has married another American.

As for the "bustle" it was considered beautiful then. Perhaps it is at least as beautiful as it certainly is more modest than the present-day bustle-less habit of emphasizing, in the tight-fitting dresses, the fact that no bustle is worn.

We have gained by our modern fashions. Dresses no longer drag dirt and germs into the house. Women do not squeeze themselves in at the waist, although they very often wear rubber bands, extremely bad for them, to reduce and look smaller.

But we certainly have lost something of artistic grace. However, we seem not to miss it.
